Tapes request denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge on Friday dismissed for the second time the Senate Watergate committee's request that the court order President Nixon to give it five presidential tape recordings.

"The public interest does not require that the President should be forced to provide evidence... to a Senate committee in order to furnish fuel for further hearings," U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell said in dismissing the committee's suit.

Gesell said a factor "of critical importance" in his decision was "the need to safeguard pending criminal prosecutions from the possibly prejudicial effect of pre-trial publicity."

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said the White House was "pleased to note that the Senate petition has been dismissed without prejudice. Judge Gesell's decision is in accordance with the President's view that the judicial process should be allowed to continue without undue publicity."

Gesell's ruling was issued hours after special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski and James D. St. Clair, President Nixon's Watergate lawyer, met to discuss Jaworski's demands for continued access to White House files.

Neither side would say whether any progress was made at the meeting.

Last Oct. 17, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica dismissed the Watergate committee's suit on the grounds it failed to demonstrate the court had jurisdiction.

The suit was revived when Congress passed a special bill resolving the jurisdictional problem. The case then was referred to Gesell.

Gesell rejected the President's contention that the courts have no power to decide disputes between a president and a committee of Congress. He said the Court of Appeals ruling directing Nixon to give tapes to Sirica had come down "squarely to the contrary" of Nixon's contention."

He also rejected the President's argument that he can assert a blanket, unreviewable claim of confidentiality for all presidential communications.

Local man missing in Tennessee

DYERSBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Dyer County authorities are searching the Obion River for two men they say could have driven off the James P. Lanier Memorial Bridge after the bridge collapsed on Jan. 27.

William Howell, 58, of Wynnburg in Lake County and Fred Burns, 52, of Sikeston, Mo., left Howell's home at 4 a.m. on Jan. 27 en route to northern Dyer County, but never arrived, said Chief Deputy Tommy Hribbs. The bridge collapsed about 6:30 a.m.

Hribbs said the two could have taken the route that would have taken them across the bridge. He said relatives have not seen the two since their departure from Howell's home.

Authorities began a search of the river Thursday.

Officials have said they are at a loss to explain why the concrete bridge collapsed.

Drink machine robbed of $2

Chalmer Dockins, 506 W. Gladys St., reported to police Friday that a soft drink machine at Quick Car Wash on Tanner Street had been broken into and a coin changer stolen sometime Thursday night.

Thieves pryed the padlock off the soft drink machine.

Dockins, owner of the car wash, told police about $2 was taken from the machine. The coin changer was valued at $85.

Volunteer policeman dismissed from force

Z. T. Jackson, a volunteer officer with the Sikeston Police Department, has been dismissed from the force.

Jackson says the dismissal came after he stopped a city councilman for a routine traffic violation. City officials say the dismissal came after a series of complaints against Jackson, with the one from the councilman being the latest.

Jackson was an unpaid member of the force who furnished his own car and equipment. He was not a member of the auxiliary police unit.

He said his dismissal came after he stopped Councilman Chuck Grant last Saturday night for having a defective headlight. When he pulled Grant over, Jackson said the councilman got out of his car, told him he had no business being in a police car and drove off.

Jackson said he went back to the station where other officers told him he should issue Grant a citation, but Jackson said he dropped the matter and told them he'd probably be fired Monday morning anyway.

On Monday morning three officers showed up where Jackson was working and demanded his badge and identification card, which Jackson turned over to them.

He said he went to see City Manager Bill Whitlock the next day and was told there had been several complaints against him by people he had arrested, although he said no names, except Grant's, were mentioned.

Whitlock told The Daily Standard that the incident with Grant "didn't have a thing to do with it (the firing)." He repeated that there had been several complaints against Jackson.

"He did a good job," Whitlock said, "but we felt we didn't need him any longer. We felt it best that we relieve him."

He said Grant did not demand that Jackson be fired.

Grant also said that he did not demand Jackson's firing, but did report the incident to Whitlock. He said he would have accepted the ticket if Jackson had given it to him.

Jackson said he had not been told of any complaints against him prior to his dismissal.

The only complaint he said he knew about involved the arrest of a drunk man in an automobile accident. He said he was forced to handcuff the man after he refused to go to the police car and then took a swing at Jackson.

Jackson said he was upset but "I don't blame the police department for what's happened."

He added that Police Chief Leon Culp and he had always been good friends, "but when strings are pulled upstairs, he has to move."

Danforth raps press

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Atty. Gen. John Danforth praised his staff and the Highway Patrol Friday for their actions in handling the truck blockades in Missouri this week, but had criticism for the news media.

Danforth said his staff had been working long hours in attempting to get the necessary court orders to halt the blockades through the legal system.

He said the action had been successful and "the fact is that this state is not shut down and never has been."

He characterized the media reporting of the truck blockades as "so lopsides and so distorted as to be completely inaccurate."

The press has been giving extensive coverage to remarks made by independent truckers, the attorney general said, with little coverage of the effective action his office has taken to deal with the situation.

A spokesman for Danforth said later the attorney general regretted newspaper space given to isolated cases of violence when the over-all situation in Missouri was under control.

Danforth's appearance in court to get preliminary injunctions against blockades and his meetings with truckers, along with Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps' meeting with truckers, were reported by the news media. Danforth has called two news conferences and Phelps, one, in connection with the truckers' blockades. All have been reported by the media.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Kermit Almstedt said a temporary injunction issued by Callaway County Circuit Court Judge John M. Cave Thursday was very broad and gave the state power to act in almost any situation in which traffic was impeded throughout the state.

The state should be open and vehicles should be moving across the state, Almstedt said, because "it's a very broad order."

Danforth said the state would not be bullied by the truckers. Even if violence is imminent, he said, any truckers denying a court order will be arrested and their vehicles impounded.

He emphasized that a small percentage of the independent truckers were involved in the blockades.

Every injunction served, he added, has been obeyed by the truckers.

However, Col. Sam Smith, superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, said there had been 12 to 15 arrests for violations of injunctions.

Ex-police chief runs for council

Arthur Bruce, former chief of police of Sikeston, announces his candidacy for one of two seats on the Sikeston City Council, to be filled in the April 2 city election.

Chief Bruce, as he is still called by his friends, says he believes he can render service to the people of Sikeston as a member of the City Council.

Bruce, a life- long resident of Sikeston, served as a Staff Sergeant in the Army in World War II and saw overseas duy in the South Pacific.

Bruce was active in police work for more than 20 years. He served as president of the Southeast Missouri Peace Officers Association and was a member of the Missouri Peace Officers Association, the Chief of Police Association and the National Police Officers Association.

An active member of the American Legion and former member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Bruce is also a member of the Odd Fellows Lodge and has been active in civic affairs.

Bruce has long been an active worker in the city baseball program, including Little League, Junior Babe Ruth League, Senior Babe Ruth League, Connie Mack and independent league progams. He was the commissioner of the Junior Babe Ruth League and served as manager and coach throughout the junior baseball program.

Arthur Bruce

Bruce lives with his wife Mata at 714 W. North St.

He served on the Missouri Crime Commission under Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

Bruce pledges that if he is elected he will serve the best interests of the people of Sikeston. He believes he has proved his interest in Sikeston and its development and that he is an ardent law and order man. If elected, he says his only desire is to serve the people of Sikeston.

Deal nixed by truckers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Groups of angry truckers rejected on Friday a deal worked out with government officials and said they would continue their protest shutdown until their demand for lower fuel prices was met.

Some increase in truck traffic was noted on the ninth day of the shutdown, and automakers said they would begin to recall a few of the more than 100,000 persons laid off because of the strike.

But violence continued and drivers meeting in truck stops and elsewhere accused negotiators of "selling out" in Washington.

"We are prepared to continue as long as it takes," declared Tommy Thompson, who said 300 of his fellow drivers met in Atlanta and voted unanimously to reject the agreement struck Thursday.

A similar vote was reported by 400 drivers in Michigan, where Gov. William G. Milliken ordered the National Guard placed on alert to head off any possible highway violence during the weekend.

Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama called out National Guard Military Police, Gov. Wendell R. Anderson of Minnesota placed his state police force on 12-hour shifts and Florida Gov. Reubin Askew pledged the use of police to escort moving convoys of trucks.

In Detroit, American Motors announced the recall of 7,100 workers at two plants and General Motors said it was recalling 2,200 persons at a Dayton, Ohio, plant. The automakers said the recalls were possible because delivery of needed parts by truck had resumed.

But there were still at least 100,000 out-of-work people because of the strike, and there were new layoffs.

A New York steel plant laid off 1,500 workers because it was not getting materials, and Westinghouse said it was furloughing 1,700 employes at four plants in Ohio and one in Kentucky.

Food suppliers in the South and Midwest said food shortages had not yet shown up, but could next week if the strike continues. There were scattered shortages reported in the Northeast.

The government estimated traffic up 20 per cent, and Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe said the Justice Department was investigating possible antitrust violations in connection with the strike.

Pennsylvania Gov. Milton J. Shapp, who participated in negotiations got a chilly reception Friday when he attemped to sell the package to drivers gathered at a truck stop in Bartonsville, Pa.

Shapp telegrammed President Nixon expressing strong dissatisfaction with Saxbe's intent to investigate civil action against strikers, and he told the assembled drivers, "To hell with Nixon."

About 125 drivers listened as Shapp, a former truck driver, described the agreement as the best

Delay draws stiff 320-year sentence

ST. LOUIS (AP) — One of the stiffest prison sentences ever handed down in federal court here was given to Dallas R. Delay Friday for his conviction on federal bank robbery charges in connection with last year's murder-extortions of a Grandin, Mo., banker and his family.

U. S. District Judge James H. Meredith sentenced Delay, 33, to 320 years in prison. He had been convicted on four charges by a jury last month in connection with the bank robbery and murders of Robert H. Kitterman, his wife, Bertha, and their teen-aged daughter, Roberta, in January of last year.

Delay and two other men, Jerry W. Rector, 21, and Lloyd D. Cowin, 20, are serving three life prison terms each on state murder convictions in connection with the incident.

Both Cowin and Rector are to be sentenced on the federal charges March 1. They pleaded guilty a few hours after Delay was convicted.

Kitterman, the president of the Bank of Grandin, and his wife and daughter were found tied to trees and shot to death after $10,850 was withdrawn by Kitterman from the bank in an extortion plot Jan. 17.

Meredith said the federal sentence would be served after Delay finished the state sentences.

A federal probation officer in St. Louis said that if Delay were ever paroled from his state sentences and began to serve the federal terms, he would not be eligible for parole for about 51 years.

Bond set to sign reorganization bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond, assuming control of the four-year struggle over government reorganization, will sign the reorganization bill next Wednesday.

Bond's office will begin working on the hundreds of transfers in the reorganization bill. New directors will have to be named for the 14 major departments and hundreds of divisions under those departments.

Reorganization began in 1969 with preliminary studies. The legislature, responding to a study by the state Reorganization (Little Hoover) Commission, put the 1972 constitutional amendment to the voters and it was approved overwhelmingly.

In the 1973 legislative session, a compromise bill, the result of months of committee study and floor debate in both houses, was vetoed by the governor.

A week ago another compromise bill, described by the governor as "clearly better" than the one he vetoed, was passed in the special legislative session.

Bond's office announced Friday he would sign the bill Wednesday in ceremonies in the Capitol rotunda at 1:30 p.m.

CRIME PREVENTION WEEK

Crime fighting should not be confined to the police department. It is the duty of every U. S. citizen - as National Crime Prevention Week (February 10-16) emphasizes.

The growing menace and cost of crime becomes more serious with every passing year, and the need for grass roots support of year- round crime prevention programs is urgent. Now, as never before, each individual must do some soul-searching to discover if he has been guilty of disregarding the rights and property of others. Or has he been hesitant to get "involved" when his aid might have helped solve or prevent a crime? If the answer to any of these is "Yes", a shifting of personal priorities is in order.

Every crime from vandalism and shoplifting to bank robbery and murder should be of concern to all citizens -- if we don't care no one else will. Moral degeneration and destruction of organized, law-abiding society is the penalty for condoning lawlessness. Crime prevention is the business of police and law enforcement agencies. They need the support of a concerned citizenry everyday of every week in the year.

LOWDOWN ON HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE: IT CAN SHORTEN YOUR LIFE

We all need blood pressure. That's what moves blood throughout the circulatory system. It's similar to water pressure pushing the water through a garden hose. Blood pressure normally rises and falls with each beat of the heart. But when it goes up and stays up, you have what doctors call hypertension or, high blood pressure. And you're in trouble, along with the 23 million other Americans who suffer from this silent and mysterious killer.

High blood pressure is silent because there are no easily discernible symptoms. It's mysterious because, in 90 per cent of the cases, doctors don't know its cause. And the tragedy is that half of the people who have high blood pressure don't know it; of those who do, most are being treated inadequately or not at all.

The American Heart Association, and its Affiliates and Chapters across the nation, are determined to do something about this disease which can lead to two of the major cardiac killers — heart attack and stroke.

Substantial sums of money are being invested in heart research to solve the medical mystery of hypertension. For it is believed that finding the cause could bring us closer to a cure.

But the important message for all Americans is this: high blood pressure is easily detected and can usually be controlled.

Detection is as easy as a visit to your doctor. But Heart Associations realize that many Americans put off a visit to their doctor until they "feel sick." And, since you can have high blood pressure without knowing it, without feeling sick, Heart Associations are beginning to conduct screening programs throughout the year wherever people congregate — in schools, shopping centers, even at industrial plants. The goal: find hidden hypertensives and refer them to their doctors or to treatment programs in health centers or clinics.

Hypertension screening programs are just one of the many ways your Heart Fund dollars are put to work for you and for your heart by the Heart Association. This is just one good reason why you should give generously when your Heart Fund volunteer calls.

According to the News Digest, gloom purveyors love to call the United States the "sick" society. Because the U. S. fails to measure up to their utopian standards, they claim that revolutionary changes are necessary. Hardly ever do they mention some of the benefits of living in this nation.

We have the highest living standard in the world. Our national income equals that of the next six highest nations combined. While half of the world subsists on $100 per capita income a year, the U. S. enjoys an average of $3,600. Even the highly developed West European nations have per capita incomes of only about $1,600. Russians, living in an alleged "workers' paradise," average $800 a year. A mere six per cent of the world's population lives in the U. S. Yet it graduates as many from high school as all the nations in the world combined. We also have more college graduates than the total of all the other nations.

Professional pessimists often cite the number of American poor, some 15 per cent of our population. But if 15 per cent are poor, 85 per cent are not poor. Most countries would be pleased if they had such low poverty figures.

These facts are not intended as a way of bragging, but as a way to set the record straight.

MANSFIELD REPLIES

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield made good sense in his response to President Nixon's State of the Union message when he pointed out that "To excise Watergate and what it implies before it becomes fatal to liberty is a fundamental responsibility of this government."

That was a direct response to the President's plea that Congress bring its investigations to a prompt end because "One year of Watergate is enough."

In making that plea, the President indicated he feels the investigations are merely a vendetta aimed solely at him. They are not that except insofar as the President himself may have had responsibility for Watergate in any of its aspects. The real purpose of the congressional aspects of Watergate investigations is, as Mansfield clearly stated, to make sure the nation's electoral system is honest.

Those investigations, Mansfield said, probably will be concluded this year.

As for the crimes of Watergate, they cannot be put to rest by Congress. That is the task for the courts and the courts must take however long may be necessary to complete their work, for as Mansfield also pointed out, "there are no judicial shortcuts."

Regarding the President's accomplishments during the last five years, Mansfield gave credit where credit was due. He commended Secretary of State Henry Kissinger for his efforts in negotiating peace in Southeast Asia and in the Middle East. He complimented the President for calling an international conference on the energy shortage.

But he also made clear that Congress has had its successes, too, and that there is need for cooperation between the executive and legislative branches if the nation's work is to be done in the future.

He justifiably criticized the President for excessive curtailment of public information in the name of national security, attacks on the press, impoundment of funds, exercising sole authority over the budget, executive contempt for Conress and illegal invasions of privacy.

His case would have been stronger if he could have reported greater accomplishment on the part of Congress in the fields of election campaign reforms and self- discipline over spending of federal funds. But he did appeal to the nation for support of legislation to give the nation "a new system of open elections, openly paid for."

While there may have been tinges of partisanship in the Mansfield response to the President, it was on the whole a balanced and intelligent statement. If the Democratic leadership in Congress can build its performance this session on that foundation, this should be a most constructive year for the nation.

MUST ACT AS PEOPLE ORDERED

In 1972 the people of Missouri voted to eliminate the intangible tax, and the tax on household goods, the latter considered by many a nuisance tax.

The Legislature has already done as it was told to do, and eliminated the intangible tax.

Now it is attempting to eliminate the household goods tax, but is being opposed by Gov. Bond on the grounds that repeal of the tax will mean too much revenue loss for local institutions, including schools, counties, cities

We agree it will be difficult to find other means of getting the tax money that now comes in from levies on household goods, and that which has come in from intangible taxes.

Neither do we believe it should have been ordered repealed by the voters. All of us know too many people who have thousands of dollars invested in household articles as an investment, because certain types are rapidly increasing in value, and we believe it should be taxed just as other property is taxed.

But - we believe in letting the people decide, and even though we don't agree, we think the Legislature should do as the people told it to do - repeal the household tax. Our Legislatures can do nothing else, it seems to us, if Missouri is to live up to its motto that the will of the people is supreme.

DRIVING IN A FOG

There should be a law, or maybe there is, forbidding anyone driving in a fog such as we had last week, without any headlights showing, or even with parking lights. With the latter, the illumination is so faint, it amounts to nearly nothing when it comes to warning those who meet such a car. We came in from the Nursing Home Friday morning at 10 o'clock, nearly collided with two cars which had no headlights at all, and had to strain our eyes for the one with just parking lights.

ANOTHER NEEDLESS SHORTAGE

What leaders of the aerospace industry have feared is now coming to pass. Layoffs in the aerospace and electronics industries, coupled with an antitechnology "campaign" are bearing their bitter fruits. An AP dispatch from Washington, D. C., reports that enrollment in engineering schools during the past year has dropped severely and "... could add up to a shortage of engineers in 1975."

The dispatch quotes the Dean of the College of Engineering at Pennsylvania State University who comments: "Engineering will never become obsolete. National statistics indicate there will be a shortage of new engineers in four years if high school graduates do now show a renewed interest." The Dean of UCLA school of engineering and applied science predicts that by mid-1970's, engineers will be as scarce and as courted by employers as they were in the heydays of the 1960's. He estimates that between now and 1975 the country will need 60,000 to 70,000 new engineers each year. But only about half that number is expected to graduate.

These are the trained people that representatives of the aerospace industry have said hold the key to solution of the massive social, economic and environmental problems that today threaten to rend the fabric of our civilization. Paradoxically, hostility to science and technology -- and engineers -- has greatly multiplied those problems.

STANDING AROUND

Yes, we stand by the office of the President, as a page advertisement carried by many daily newspapers calls upon the people to do. But does our President stand by that office? The advertisement was signed by a large number of big name Republicans and was supposed to arouse sympathy of the public for what is being brought out against the President of the United States. There was no "Watergate" when Dweight Eisenhower was President, nor Coolidge nor any other Republican Presidents in the past except Warren Harding. His Teapot Dome scandal resulted in his death while in office, believed by many to have been suicide because of the scandal created by a member of his cabinet. Yes, the office of the President of the United States was the greatest national leadership in the world until just now. What are we going to do about it? Mr. Nixon could resign and let Vice - President Ford take over the office. We believe that the nation would be behind him. We hope the House of Representatives will vote for impeachment soon. That, we believe, would bring Mr. Nixon's resignation.

Now they tell us it is unexpectedly fading and there'll be no more spectacle.

FBI Hunts Gunslingers: Highway Civil War Looms After Terrorist Shoot Out Eye Of Teamster

PITTSBURG -- What's an eye worth? Ask the Teamsters member, Local 391, Greensboro, N. C., who had one shot out as he was earning his daily bread on terror-ridden, besieged, Molotov- cocktail strewn highways of this land of the free.

And one truck driver is dead. Atty. Gen. Saxbe says this death has been attributed to the over- the - road violence. A state of emergency, mobilization of the National Guard, bloodshed and destruction in 40 states, immobilization of food and layoffs of thousands have cost the public tens of millions of dollars.

Saxbe has conferred with FBI Director Clarence Kelley. All FBI headquarters and 94 U.S. Attorneys have been alerted to search out instances of violent interference with, and damage to, commerce and violations of the Hobbs Anti-Racketeering Act.

Flying squads still roam the turnpikes. Inside the White House and in Bill Simon's energy headquarters they called it a rebellion. Hysteria shook the House and Senate Commerce Committees. Teamsters Brotherhood president Frank Fitzsimmons wryly told a friend: "If it were the Teamsters union they'd have clapped us in prison, called us gansters and murderers. Instead our men are being hounded from the highways which are our bread and butter."

Many Teamsters did their daily runs-- with guns ready. No one wants his eye shot out, nor maiming by flying windshield glass,nor burns from Molotov cocktails.

The other day Dick Nixon's upsurging special assistant on labor trouble shooting, Bill Usery, Federal Mediation chief, was in Bill Simon's office, asking aloud of no one in particular: "Who do you deal with in this drivers' strike?"

It's incredible. There is no central organizatin. There are probably 40 organizations of owner-driver big rig independent operators.

Some of the responsible ones--17 men and one woman met secretly on Jan. 4 in Cleveland's Sheration Hotel. They put out a statement. Called for action. Decided to meet again in Washington. Warned of the Jan. 31 shutdown. Some of them represented independents who belonged to the Teamsters union. Most didn't. But who does speak for the 100,000 powerful owner-driver entrepreneurs of the open roads?

It's incredible. No one speaks for all of them. Yet many claim that right. Who are the terrorists, the flying squads blood ving up the ever- stretching concret ribbons?

Further, who supervises tens of thousands of them? No one, actually. The Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) covers some of them-- the so-called hard freight haulers. But ICC doesn't control or regulate the exempt carriers-- and these owner- drivers haul, it now appears, the bulk of the nation's food supplies. And can cut off by terror the remainder carried by fleet owners. Thus the haulers of fish, meat, poultry and produce -- the nation's basic foods -- are exempt from ICC regulation.

Why? The owner- drivers, and the force they can muster, and the rebellion, reveal them as a crucial part of our economy-- the purveyors to your own kitchen, institutions, schools, hospitals, the very core of this nation's life. Supposedly the Cost of Living Council, under Prof. John Dunlop's direction, controls the exempt drivers' fees.

But, as is characteristic, the Council spokesmen ducked all questions. They're specialists at this. Most of them don't know a rig from a rib roast. So the Council, too, was caught short.

These owner-drivers now show themselves as a powerful force-- strong enough to have Fitzsimmons demand police action, demand prosecution in the strongest terms printable-- on advice of counsel Charles (Chuck) Colson.

But basically the owner-drivers are a debt-ridden band. Their profit margins are slimmer than a roadside hamburger.

Their rigs cost anywhere from $35,000 to $50,000 each. They are in debt to the bank. They struggle with heavy insurance. If a tire blows, or there is a serious breakdown, or the snows ice up the Pennsylvania Turnpike and they jack- knife and are frozen in for a few days, they lose the whole profit on a regular run -- or several runs. Most are damn good men.

Then they were gouged by diesel fuel distributors. And the owner-drivers to survive needed two concessions-- the right to pass the increased costs to the shipper who hired them and guarantee of a hundred per cent of their fuel needs at controlled prixes (or rolled back).

Since they are the conduit of food to your dinner table tonight, they deserve to earn a living. But not at the price of terror. They aren't hoboes of the road. They are collectively a big business. There should be an immediate study made to provide them with a bureau in the Department of Trnasportation to which to turn.

Otherwise they'll be out roaming the highways again in two or three months. It's all too costly. Food prices are high enough without artificial scarcities. Time has come to cut through this jungle. And what's an eye worth?

JACK ANDERSON & LES WHITTEN SAYS:

The 'Puppy Mills'

WASHINGTON-- Mass breeders of $200 million worth of puppies and kittens are shipping sick and dying animals to America's children with the active cooperation of a few crooked veterinarians.

Of $310 million in pet sales each year, a Humane Society of the United States study estimates that two- thirds are products of "puppy mills" where pups are often treated worse than cabbages (and are actually shipped two- to- a- cabbage- crate for long distances).

The year- long secret probe was headed by Humane Society chief gumshoe Frank McMahon. Often working undercover, he found dogs starving in transit, freezing in airplane holds, sold with hideous diseases and shuddering with trauma and neuroses.

Most of these helpless would- be pets were whelped in Midwest "puppy mills" where dogs are bred on a mass production basis and shipped to pet stores all over the country. Most of the "mills" are "operated with one single goal: money," the report says. The wages of such greed, says the society document, are "coccidiosis, distemper, bronchitis, hookworms, roundworms and...exposure."

The "puppy mills" are able to get the ill dogs and cats shipped because "some veterinarians take the breeder's word that an animal is healthy and others sign a stack of blank (health) certificates for the breeder to fill in."

Even some respectable mail order houses are criticized by the Humane Society which charges that the "Spiegel catalog offers animals sight unseen-- unseen by Spiegl, too, as the animals are shipped directly from the puppy mill to the buyer without going through Spiegel's hands."

But the most heartless treatment occurs in C. O. D. shipments. There, if one animal is sick, the pet store simply refuses the whole shipment and the weary animals are sent the long road home to the puppy mill, often dying on the way from illness or starvation.

In his travels, investigator McMahon found a Virginia store which sold a kitten to a seven- year- old child. The kitten died four days later of distemper yet the pet store owner refused a veterinarian's plea to stop selling other kittens exposed to the deadly virus.

In Greensboro, N. C., a veterinarian reported every one of several hundred puppies he had examined as they arrived from puppy mills had bronchitis. In two California towns, 300 pets were found in various pet stores, but half were dead and many others were ill.

In one undercover job, our intern, Rae Nelson, went out on a "buy" of a handsome Doberman from a "reputable" pet shop. When Ms. Nelson and the society took the $250 dog to a veterinarian, it was diagnosed as having a lung infection.

Although federal laws administered by the Agriculture Department outlaw shady dog shippers, the federal inspectors are spread too thin to do much good. And only Illinois, the society found, has a puppy protection law with any fangs in it. There, pet shops are inspected, and some 2,500 complaints a year are registered and investigated.

Another result of mass production is that dogs sold as "purebreds" may appear aristocratic as sad- eyed pups, but grow up into lovable, but outrageous- looking mongrels. This is because of slipshod breeding at the mills.

"With 1.75 million applications handled last year, it is still possible for breeders and pet shop operators to take unethical advantage of the appeal that "American Kennel Club registered' and 'with papers' have for the buying public," says the soon- to- be- published study.

To counter the traffic in canine and feline misery, the society recommends buying dogs bred in your own area where you can visit the kennels, or better yet, settling for a friendly mutt in your local animal shelter who, otherwise, must be put to death.

FOOTNOTE: A Spiegel spokesman said they had been shipping puppies for 15 years at a rate of about 3,000 per year and average no more than five complaints a year. The kennels are carefully inspected, said the spokesman, and Spiegel had a money- back guarantee policy.

TAX BACKSCRATCH: While the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation investigates the IRS, the IRS has been pampering the committee by providing man- to- man assistance for members needing help on their tax returns. The White House gets the same kind of front- door service.

Among the committee members who accepted the services of the IRS Capitol Hill tax team are chairman Wilbur Mills, D- Ark., and Reps. Al Ullman, D- Ore., and Harold Collier, R- Ill., and Sen. Carl Curtis, R- Neb. Members huffily insist that this IRS hand- holding has no effect on how tough they are on IRS.

Perhaps embarrassed by their own special handling, the joint committee recommended a few months ago in an official report that IRS inform "each individual taxpayer...of the availability of free tax return preparation service...."

Responded the IRS: "Limited manpower resources prevent the Service from offering free tax return preparation service to all taxpayers. Instead, IRS emphasizes the technique of self- help, whereby taxpayers prepare and complete their own returns with instructions and assistance from Service employees."

In other words, no one need apply except pooh- bahs.

Three bound over to Circuit Court

CHARLESTON -- Preliminary hearings Thursday before Magistrate T. J. Brown Jr. resulted in three persons being bound over to Circuit Court for appearances on Feb. 12.

Ronnie Lane of East Prairie was bound over on an armed robbery charge and remains in custody in lieu of $5,000 bond. He is accused of taking $130 from the cash register of the Friendly Market in East Prairie on Jan. 15 while holding a pistol on Mrs. Carolyn Jackson.

Mrs. Jackson was the only witness at the preliminary. According to her testimony, she was in the store after closing time at 10 p.m. when a man knocked on the door. Although she did not know the man's name, Mrs. Jackson said his face was familiar and she let him in. He asked for a carton of soft drinks and when she rang up the sale and the cash register opened, she said the man pulled out a small, chrome-plated pistol and demanded the money.

After she refused twice to give him the money, Mrs. Jackson said he leaned across the counter and took the bills from the register and, after warning her not to call out because someone was watching, the man left.

On cross examination, Mrs. Jackson described the man as being of medium build, about 5 feet, 7 inches tall, with light hair and a mustache. When asked how she could be sure Lane was the man in question, she said, "When someone points a gun at you, you can't forget the face."

Bruce Edward Jinkerson of Zalma was bound over following a preliminary hearing on a charge of distributing a controlled substance (LSD) to a minor. He remains in custody under $10,000 bond.

Jinkerson also was sentenced to 10 days in jail on an improper registration charge and 10 days on a charge of failure to have his operator's license on his person. The sentences are to run concurrently and he was given credit for time served. Costs in the cases were certified to the county.

Following a preliminary on a charge of assault with intent to kill, Stanford Nevels of Wyatt was also bound over to Circuit Court. He is free on $1,500 bond.

Sam Rigney of Wyatt, who Nevels is accused of cutting on the left side of the face with a knife, was the only witness. The incident allegedly occurred Jan. 19 at the rear of the Charlie Jackson Tavern in Wyatt.

Rigney testifed he, Nevels and some other men were drinking the night in question and there was a disagreement between he and Nevels which resulted in the knifing.

Rigney was reluctant about naming the other men who might have witnessed the incident. He said he was positive Nevels had cut him but he could not remember seeing the knife.

Irene Bailey pleaded not guilty to a charge of common assault and trial was set for Feb. 14. She is accused of assulting Marilyn Given by hitting her with a purse on Feb. 1 and is free on $500 bond.

A charge of disturbing the peace brought a suspended 30-day jail sentence to Lawrence Smith on condition he remain away from the premises of his wife and pay $23 court costs.

Bill Jeffords of Marston was fined $117.50 on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

In a civil suit, First National Bank of Cape Girardeau received judgment for possession of a 1968 automobile, plus costs in a security agreement suit brought against Johnnie Giles of Charleston.

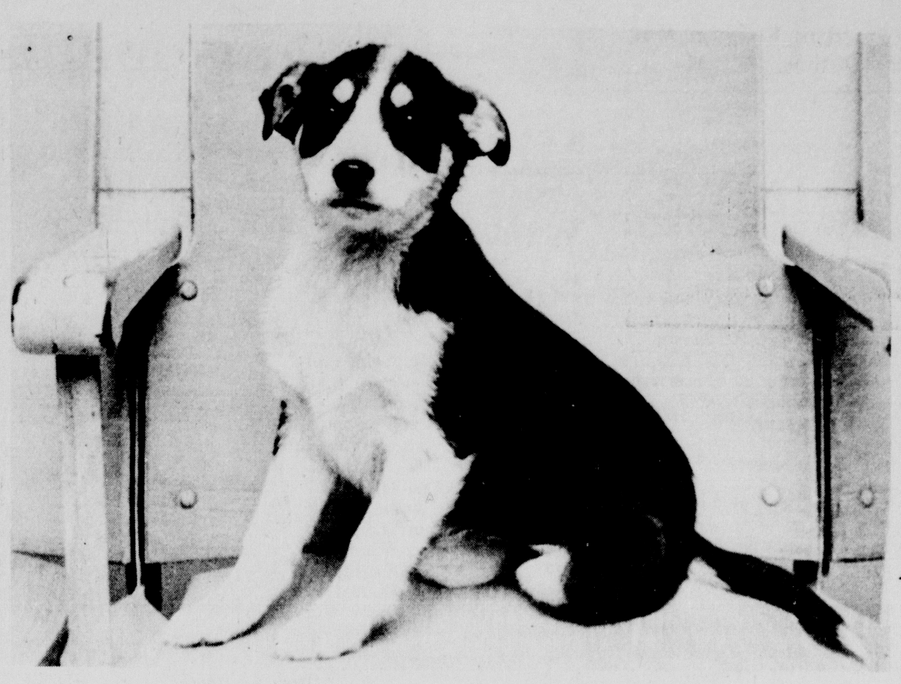
A charge of driving with expired license plates against Calvin Leroy Hancock of Matthews was continued to Feb. 14. Charges of driving while intoxicated and driving while license is revoked against Robert M. Tubbs of Charleston were also continued to Feb. 14.

Charges of driving while intoxicated and driving while operator's license is revoked against Roger D. Scott of East Prairie were continued to Feb. 21.

Other court action and fines this week included:

Dixie Lee Counts, driving without an operator's license, $21; Donald Burcks, non-support payments reduced from $20 to $10 per week; Delta Loan and Finance Co. received judgment in a promissory note suit of $139.50 with interest and $13 costs from Ronnie and Mary Wagner.

Missouri Delta Community Hospital received judgment of $138.15 with interest and $15 costs in an account suit against J. T. and Catherine Latamondeer and a judgment of $159.75 with interest and $14 costs in an account suit against Loyce Johnston.



Another pup needs home

Here's another puppy from the city pound. He was picked up by humane officer Bob Beardsley late in the week and is available for adoption. Persons interested in adopting a dog may contact Beardsley at the police station during the week. At night or on weekends, he can be contacted at his home.

Mouser heads gambling opposition

BLOOMFIELD — Stoddard County Sheriff Ralph Mouser was elected chairman of the Stoddard County chapter of Missourians Against Legalized Gambling in an organizational meeting held Thursday night in the basement of Trinity United Methodist Church.

Loren Coffey of Dexter was elected vice chairman; the Rev. Lester Clayton of Dexter, secretary; and the Rev. James Pike of Bloomfield, treasurer.

Mouser stated that the newly organized chapter, coordinated through the Christian Civic Foundation based in St. Louis, will attempt to provide data against gambling for all Stoddard Countians.

According to Mouser, Rep. Jerry T. Howard of Dexter told him he would definitely vote against bills to legalize gambling before the State Legislature. Rep. C. F. Cline of Sikeston will also be contacted by the chapter for a statement on the matter.

In the last session of the General Assembly, Mouser said a bill for legalized gambling was defeated by only one vote. An all-out effort will be necessary to compete with the St. Louis- Kansas City areas which have been favorable to the bills.

Mouser said it appears that out-state Missouri will be the deciding factor in whether or not the state will have legalized gambling.

Chapter members stated they thought the issue will be brought before voters in a special election, and if this happens they will be prepared to fight against the gambling proposals.

A difference of two degrees lower in winter and higher in summer in heating and air-conditioning units in U.S. homes could save the equivalent of 100 million tons of coal per year, says Arthur D. Little, head of a research and management consulting firm.

Ann Landers

Ex-sister-in-law's picture must go

Dear Ann Landers: My brother and his wife were divorced recently. When we redecorated our home (seven years ago) we planned the living room around a beautiful photographic portrait of his bride and hung it up on the most important wall. It is a very large picture and we bought a fantastically expensive frame for it.

My brother will undoubtedly marry again. When he does we will, of course, take down the portrait of his former wife. But what should we do about it in the meantime? If we take the picture down we will have to redecorate again. There's a hole behind it the size of a grapefruit.-- Baffled In Ballard

Dear Baff: Your ex- sister-in- law's bridal picture has got to go. NOW. Have another photographic portrait made of your husband or your children. Or-- buy a replica of a painting by one of the old masters and place it in that frame.

Dear Ann Landers: We can all use little bits and pieces of philosophy to get us through a bad day. A few years ago I clipped something out of the paper and carried it with me to read when I got to feeling blue. I don't know where it came from and it is so badly worn I can just barely read it. Will you print it in your column so I will have a fresh copy? I'll bet many others will profit from it as well.

On this day--
Mend a quarrel.
Search out a forgotten friend.
Dismiss a suspicion and replace it with trust.
Encourage someone who has lost faith.
Keep a promise.
Forget an old grudge.
Examine your demands on others and vow to reduce them.
Fight for a principle.
Express your gratitude.
Overcome an old fear.
Take two minutes to appreciate the beauty of nature.
Tell someone you love him.
Tell him again.
And again.
And again.
-- A Reader In Scottsbluff, Nebraska

Dear Reader: Here it is. Again. You clipped it from my column and I am delighted you asked for a rerun.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm writing about my 46- year- old mother who looks 35 and acts 17. Dad died two years ago of liver trouble (booze) and she put up with plenty. Now she is making up for lost time. At present she has a 30- year- old unemployed poet living with her.

Our children 6 and 8 adore "Gram." My husband says I can't take the girls to her home because of the "immoral set-up." Last night he announced she isn't welcome here, even if she comes alone. Is he justified?-- Torn Up

Dear T.: It's awfully hard to raise a 46- year- old mother, so tell your husband to keep the latchstring out and his opinions to himself. It's perfectly O. K. for a widow to have friends, even "unemployed poets."

Drugs; How much is too much? Is pot O. K.? Is L. S. D. too much? If you're on dope or considering it, get Ann Landers's new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs." For each booklet ordered, send a dollar bill plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (16c postage) to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 3346, Chicago, Ill. 60654.

Successful persons share their secrets

By Sharen K. Hunt

Some families always seem to "get the breaks" in life. How they do it was the topic of a study done by Reuben Hill, sociology professor at University of Minnesota in Minneapolis. He interviewed 104 three-generation families about relationships, plans, arguments, etc. About one-fourth of these families were considered successful, or managed well.

Luck wasn't the reason because these families "had certain ways of handling their time, talents and money, so as to gain the things in life they want most." Hill's key findings might be guidelines for families and those about to marry.

Marrying after 25 meant ending up with better homes and more stimulating jobs, for the men in the study.

Most of the "successful" families had no more than two children. Hill thinks this pattern relates to the idea of social placement. Today, education determines jobs more than family, so with fewer children, more can be invested in their education.

Be prepared to cope with the unexpected. According to the Reader's Digest summary of this research, two-thirds of all the changes -- moves, jobs, purchases, savings -- weren't predicted three months in advance. The families that adapted to change most easily were those that had a set of "family policies", a kind of informal game plan.

These might be ordinary and obvious, but the successful families were consistent.

The families that are happiest with their decisions are the ones that have discussed them the most. Sometimes, decisions turn out to be wrong, but since they were argued and discussed, it helps families accept the results. They learn from their mistakes.

Choose decision- maker wisely - Hill says that husband and wife and maybe older children make decisions in the more successful families. In each family though, there is usually one who has better judgment in some things and families profit by being aware and agreeable to that arrangement.

Rely on your relatives - Relatives were utilized by successful families for advice, counseling, economic help and child care. There are mixed feelings about this dependence, but how well this keeps generations together depends on the middle generation.

All in all, this study of three-generation families showed the family structure is resilient and can survive and grow. The families that manage well, are thoughtfully organized, with good communication and take advantage of available help.

"All happy families resemble one another, every unhappy family is unhappy in its own way." Tolstoy.

Mini-Farm wives meet, plan to organize club

A group of 14 housewives, all residents of Sikeston Mini- Farms, met Wednesday morning at the home of Mrs. Charles (Judy) Williams for coffee, conversation and to acquaint themselves with each other and their families.

Over 50 families now live in the Mini- Farms development and, although most are from Sikeston, many of the families did not know each other.

The women discussed plans to organize later and include working women.

The group discussed the advantages of living at the Mini- Farms, with less traffic, and disadvantages such as being away from handy grocery stores.

One of the group's main subjects was car pools. Many of the mothers take children into town daily to kindergarten, and they discussed the possibility of starting car pools to conserve energy and save time.

Wedding invitations have been received by friends of Miss Gladys Kendall, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. O. E. Kendall fo Sikeston, to James A. Kevil of Sikeston, on February 20. Miss Kendall is one of Sikeston's most accomplished young ladies. Mr. Kevil is connected with the Sikes-McMullin Grain Co., of this city.

Miss Camille Klein entertained at her home last Friday in honor of Miss Gladys Kendall, "bridge-to-be."

Mother Potter, formerly of West Frankfort, Ill., but now of Cincinnati, Ohio, was in Sikeston Wednesday in the interest of better moral conditions. She is trying to get everyone to take an individual stand against immorality. "Less girls runied, less divorces caused by immorality, and against that form of impurity existing between men. Less boys ruined and the misuse of the drug for the seduction of boys and girls" is the way her literature reads.

What's the law?

The case of the faithful spouse

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Bert's marriage went from ideal to ordeal. After 20 years of wedded bliss, his wife suddenly began to accuse him of running around with other women.

Actually, however, Bert was as faithful as a hound dog. Unfortunately, no matter what he said, he was unable to convince his green- eyed wife to the contrary. Consequently, he finally sued to end their marriage on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment.

"My wife's constantly after me like a mosquito after a nudist," he complained in court. "And I can't take it any more. If I conducted even half of the affairs she accuses me of, I'd be a caterer."

"So, I'm suspicious," responded Bert's wife. "That's no grounds to end a marriage. It's too trivial a matter. Almost all wives suspect their husbands of a little hanky- panky. That's not cruel and inhuman treatment, that's life."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you free faithful Bert from his suspicious wife?

This is how the Judge ruled: YES! The judge held that a wife constantly accusing her husband of infidelity and carousing cannot fairly be characterized as trivial. And, when it affects his state of health, concluded the judge, he cannot be required to endure it indefinitely.

Fertilize pastures now, expect quick returns

Now is an excellent time to fertilize established pastures. Livestock owners who top-dress now can expect quick returns. Normally, fall growth can be doubled or tripled. This added fall growth means extra pasture during the late fall and early winter and a saving on high priced hay. Top- dressing at this time also improves the chances of a good seed crop for next spring.

There are several reasons for good response to summer top- dressing treatments. Missouri weather, the nature of grass, and fertility are all involved. It takes as much or more fertility to grow grass as corn. Pastures that have been grazed all season or had a hay crop removed have already used as much fertility as a corn crop.

Normally, late summer brings rain and cooler temperatures. When soil temperatures are cool and moisture is present, grasses such as fescue and orchard grass start to grow. In order to get optimum growth, the fertility needs to be high. With an adequate top- dressing treatment now, the fertility will be there when moisture and temperatures are favorable.

Based on research at Southwest Research Center at Mount Vernon, it appears that a top- dressing treatment of 300 to 500 pounds of 20-10-20 per acre now and another 300 to 500 pounds of 20-10-20 per acre in the winter would give optimum yields of both forage and seed on tall fescue.

Treatment use in research varied from no nitrogen to 120 pounds of nigrogen at a time. Nitrogen was applied in December, March, June and August. Phosphate treatments varied from none to 100 pounds top- dressed annually in addition to a broadcast applications at seeding of 0 to 400 pounds of actual phosphate.

Potash treatments varied from 0 to 200 pounds top-dressed annually, in addition to a broadcast treatment at seeding time varying from 0 to 400 pounds of actual potash.

On nitrogen plots the top yields were received where the grass received 60 to 100 pounds of nitrogen per acre in both late summer and December.

On the phosphate plots, the top yields were the plots receiving 50 to 100 pounds of actual phosphate annually as a top- dressing.

On the potash plots, the top yields were the plots receiving 100 to 200 pounds of actual potash annually as a top-dressing.

Combining the figures from this research adds up to 60 to 90 pounds of nitrogen in the summer and again in the winter for a total annual application of 120 to 180 pounds.

Officials can't confirm wheat delay agreement

WASHINGTON (AP)— Top Nixon farm officials say they are unable to confirm reports that the Soviet Union has agreed to delay taking a substantial quantity of U. S. wheat that had been ordered for delivery this fiscal year.

But the Agriculture Department will issue a weekly report on exports Friday that might provide an answer, listings which showed that as of Jan. 20- the most recent tabulation- the Soviets still had 32.5 million bushels of wheat to be delivered by June 30.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz told a reporter Wednesday that he had "no confirmation" that Russia had agreed this week to delaying the deliveries until the new U. S. harvest comes in next summer.

Pressure to get the Soviets to delay remaining wheat deliveries has been exerted through private U. S. exporters who have been urged to seek postponements and by government- to- government requests to Moscow.

Vladimir S. Alkhimov, Soviet deputy foreign trade minister, had been quoted earlier as saying the delay in 1973- 74 wheat exports had been approved.

If so, the denial of knowledge by Butz could point to postponements worked out through the private export trade with the Russians and not by official government agreements.

Don Pearlberg, USDA director of economics, said he knew only of trade reports concerning Alkimov's statement. But if true, he said, the delay would help assure the United States enough wheat until harvest in May and June.

"I think it would change the psychology of the market so that people who are holding wheat for the high dollar will start letting it go," Paarlberg told a reporter.

Paarlberg testified Monday before a Senate subcommittee that he saw no possibility of a flour or bread shortage if markets are kept open and export controls avoided.

If it turns out that Russia has agreed to postpone delivery of approximately 30 million bushels of wheat this season, that would boost the prospective reserve, or carryover, next July 1 to about 218 million bushels from 178 million USDA espects now.

That would still be among the smallest reserves on record, but Paarlberg and others think it would be more than enough to satisfy U. S. requirements until the new crop is ready.

WASHINGTON (AP)— Farmers, looking ahead to potential record production in 1974, bought record quantities of fertilizer during the first half of the current crop year, according to industry officials.

The Fertilizer Institute, in a report for last July- December production and use, said U. S. production rose 7 per cent from a year earlier. But the report showed shipments for domestic use during the six months climbed 15 per cent.

Edwin M. Wheeler, institute president, said that inventories at manufacturing plants were down 43 per cent from a year earlier as of Dec. 31, 1973.

Wheeler said the record demand for fertilizer was tied directly "to the unusual pressures on farmers to produce more food and fiber and to prospective high crop prices" in 1974.

$7,200 research program is effort to improve yields

COLUMBIA — A $7,200 research program at the University of Missouri has been announced as part of a nationwide effort to improve soybean yields.

The proposal, submitted by David Johnson, University of Missouri, was only one of five approved out of a total of 29 proposals submitted to the American Soybean Assn. (ASA) Research Foundation.

The research project will concentrate on nitrogen fixation and nitrogen uptake from the soil in relation to supply, movement and distribution of carbohydrates in soybeans.

The check was presented by Dennis Blankenship, representing the ASA Research Foundation.

"The ASA Research Foundation is investing approximately $100,000 in soybean research this year. We conducted a nationwide search to find the best qualified and best equipped scientist available.

"This money comes straight from the growers and the soybean industry. So we do not believe it should be used for buildings or equipment. We're simply buying the best brainpower available," said Blankenship.

The research foundation funds only projects of national or broad regional significance, and the majority of funds come from states on the basis of one-half cent per acre of soybean production.

"The research funds are distributed on the basis of what research needs to be done first and what scientist or institution can best perform that research," Blankenship added.

Pathologist says soybean diseases getting worse

COLUMBIA — Soybean disease problems are getting worse, a University of Missouri-Columbia plant pathologist reported Wednesday.

When soybeans were first introduced to this country, said Einar Palm, they were practically free from serious diseases. Now they are plagued by diseases that affect every part of the plant.

"Further in- depth research to control these diseases should have high priority," Palm told growers attending the state soybean conference.

State extension plant pathology and agronomy specialists, working cooperatively with area extension specialists, are monitoring diseases in strategic soybean growing areas. Their findings and recommendations are transmitted to growers and specialists via tele- reports, radio and newsletters.

The worst soybean disease in Missouri is charcoal rot. "It infects almost every soybean field in the state," said Palm. "Losses may hit 40 per cent or more in individual fields."

Until recently, experts thought charcoal rot hit only mature plants and was induced mainly by hot, dry weather. But Thomas Wyllie, UMC plant pathology researcher, showed the disease can infect young plants, even seedlings, and even without hot, dry weather.

"Controlling this disease will be very difficult," said Wyllie. "We are now studying how it infects the plant.

Agronomist suggests small grain herbicides

Producers of wheat and other small grains have an annual problem with certain broadleaved weeds such as vetch, mustard, docks and wild onion or garlic.

These weeds can be controlled with 2,4-D if applied at the right time. Apply ½ to ¾ lb/A of 2,4-D acid equivalent. The lower rate is for the ester form of 2,4-D and the higher rate is for the amine form. The ester form may be more injurious to the crop but is more effective on wild onion. Low volatile esters should be used to reduce the drift hazard.

Applications can be made from tillering to the joint stage of growth, but not before plants are four inches tall and not later than early boot. A 2,4-D application should not be put on small grain seedlings or during the boot to dough stage of kernel development. Such applications will result in reduced yields.

Best results can be expected if 2,4-D is applied after tillering on warm, sunny days or when temperature is above 60 degrees and when no rain is expected for 12 hours.

A 2,4-D treatment will not completely control wild onion or garlic but a ½ to 1.0- pound rate will prevent seed and aeriel bulblets.

A 2,4-D application can also be used as a pre- harvest application to kill broadleaved weeds emerging above the grain. A rate of one to 1½ pounds should be used. As weeds approach maturity they require a higher rate of application for effective kill.

The above treatments may kill legumes under- seeded in small grain unless the weed canopy is such that it affords protection from the herbicide.

Estate planning short courses set

PERRYVILLE — A farm estate planning short course will be held in Perryville in February. The three- session short course, sponsored by the Perry County University of Missouri Extension Center, will begin next Wednesday and resume Feb. 20 and 27 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Perry Plaza meeting room.

Curt Vogel, an attorney, will discuss the legal aspects in estate planning at the first session; Francis Toohey, an attorney, will talk about probate procedures, requirements and costs at the second meeting and Cletis Hanebrink, a Social Security representative, will discuss Social Security requirements and benefits at the third session.

The short course is open to the public but will be oriented to farm and small business owners. The registration fee is $4.50 and covers both husband and wife. Registration blanks may be obtained at the University of Missouri Extnesion Center and several local businesses in Perryville.

Dam is weapon against flooding

Water, like fire, is a friend to man -- when it's under control. But runaway waters, like runaway fires, bring heartache and destruction. Basements get flooded, crops ruined, roads damaged and bridges destroyed.

Floods, like fires, are best stopped before they start. We can't turn rain on and off like the water from a faucet in the kitchen sink . . . but we can trap and hold it.

A floodwater detention structure is one of the weapons against floods. It holds thousands of gallons of water. During heavy rains, water from surrounding land is trapped behind the strong earth dam. Then the trapped water drains slowly away through a tube, making room for hthe next big rain.

You'll see more and more structures such as this as progressive communities act to stop flood damages. Some will hold water back for irrigation, city water supply, fishing, wildlife and recreation.

Perhaps there's one near you -- or should be. Why don't you check with the supervisors of your local Soil Conservation District?

Pork producers discuss hog farm

BENTON — The Scot County Pork Producers Association discussed a proposed confinement hog farm that could produce 2.5 million hogs at Monday night's meeting in the courthouse. The proposed hog farm would be built in northeast Missouri, in Clark County, adjacent to the Santa Fe Railroad on approximately 7,500 acres of land.

Ronnie Burger, president of the county organization, spoke about the possiblility after hearing Charles McQuoid speak at the Missouri Pork Producers Association's annual meeting recently in Columbia.

McQuoid is a native of Memphis, Mo., in Scotland County, is an insurance man who came up with the plan for the super hog farm.

Burger said there has been an almost involuntary reaction that there is something inherently evil about such a large operation that might replace hundreds of smaller hog farms.

Burger said that whether the plant will become a reality in Clark County, in McQuoid's opinion, hinges on obtaining an adequate water supply. About two million gallons a day would be needed for both the production and processing plants.

"There are some people who think the giant operation may be the best thing that could happen to the pork industry, and others who feel that labor walkouts will be the downfall," Burger said.

Burger quoted McQuoid as saying he does not believe the operation will affect local farmers because they are self-contained and will not be sellilive animals on the open market.

Burger said McQuoid began a program like this back in 1950 but it failed because it was just on a verbal agreement, and now he has a written one.

Burger said McQuoid has $105 million dollars to help finance his operation. He plans to employ 900 people with 70 per cent of them to be women. McQuoid believes women will pay closer attention to newborn animals than men. He also plans to hire an additional 3,000 people in feeding the hogs and doing various other jobs.

KHS uses balance

BENTON — A balanced offense and stingy defense led to the Kelly Hawks 22nd victory of the basketball season Friday night as the KHS cagers swept past the Chaffee Red Devils 83-40 in Scott- Mississippi conference play.

Russ Mothershead led a nine player Hawk offensive barrage with 16 points. Jeff Jackson added 14, Mike Brashear 11 and Danny Kern 10 to round out KHS's double figure scorers.

Kelly rolled up a 18-10 lead in the first quarter and then pumped in 20 or more the next three periods while holding the Devils to 30.

The victory left The Daily Standard's top ranked Hawks with a 22-2 season slate and sends them to Bloomfield next Friday for their final regular season encounter. KHS is top seeded for the Richland Class AA regional tournament which gets underway Feb. 18.

Woods does it again

INGLEWOOD, Calif. AP — Massive George Woods formerly of Sikeston, Mo., broke the world indoor shot put record and achieved the longest throw in history, indoors or outside, with a mark of 72 feet, 2¾ inches Friday night at the Times Indoor Games.

The 310-pound Woods, of Carbondale, Ill., cracked the record of 70-4½ he set last Friday night in San Francisco. Woods had held the previous mark of 69-10¾, which he set Jan. 26 in Portland, Ore.

The former Southern Illinois strongman uncorked the throw on his first attempt against a three-man field.

Woods, big throw contained so much power that the leather-covered 16-pound steel ball bounced over a restraining net at the Forum and rolled into the stands.

Bulldogs sweep pair from P.B.

Veteran Sikeston high school head basketball coach N. P. McDaniel received a birthday present in the form of a 66-58 SEMO conference basketball victory over Poplar Bluff from his team last night. The win, Sikeston's sixth of the season, broke a three- game Bulldog losing streak. A 44-42 B-game win assured the Bulldog junior varsity of at least a tie for the conference championship. The jayvee record is 13-1.

Six-foot- 4 Roger Tillman used his good reach inside to overpower Poplar Bluff and he scored 28 points in the process. He also grabbed 14 rebounds to lead the Dogs to a 46-41 rebounding edge.

It was a night of missed shots, missed free throws and many turnovers for both teams. Poplar Bluff was able to connect on just 28 per cent of their 78 shots. Sikeston was some better, making 38 per cent of their 79 tries. Neither team was successful at the free throw line. Poplar Bluff hit half their tries, 14 of 28 and Sikeston was even worse, missing two-thirds of their 24 attempts.

The Bulldogs, who have had troubles on defense all year long, came out using a weaving zone and other assorted manuevers to try to confuse the Mules, who have dropped four of their last five games. The defense was effective and the Mules committed 28 turnovers, to just 16 for the Bulldogs, giving SHS many scoring chances which they used.

Most of all, it was the failure of the Mules big men that cost them the win. Bruce Dameworth and Robert Dodd, normally both double figure scorers, hit just four of their 28 floor shots and combined for 11 points. Dameworth, however, was the top rebounder for either team with 17.

Before the game, the Sikeston coach indicated the Dogs would run more. Since they have not been a good shooting team, it was explained that Sikeston would go to a more running game, the object -- to put more shots up. The running game helped the Bulldog offense, and with the fast-breaking Mules keeping the tempo up, the fans were treated to wide- open, wild ballgame that provided them with excitement and a whole lot of action.

Poplar Bluff controlled the game early, leading most of the first period. But, in the last minute Sikeston scored three fast- break baskets on some errant Bluff passes and claimed a five- point, 18-13, lead.

Sikeston then expanded the lead as much as seven, 33-26, but the Mules used some mistakes by their hosts to narrow the margin to three at half, 35-32.

Bulldogs fans, after watching some rather unsatisfactory efforts in the last couple of games, were wondering if and/or how the Bulldogs would fritter away the lead in the second half. But, Sikeston qualmed their follower's nerves with a good second half and ran away with the win. The margin got as large as 14, 65-51, before a few late free throws made the final score closer.

The 66-58 win gave the Bulldogs their fifth win at home, out of six total victories. Sikeston is 2-4 in conference, with a 6-11 mark overall.

Sikeston's junior varsity overcame a cold-shooting first half and a determined bunch of visitors to outlast Poplar Bluff and claim a narrow 44-42 win. The victory ran the jayvee conference record to 6-0, and clinched at least a tie for the conference championship.

Ed "Showboat" Nunnelee led Sikeston scorers with 14 points. A second sophomore, Ron Priday, scored 13 more. Ed Threlkeld led the losers with 11.

The Bulldogs were cold the entire first half. Missing Bruce Lawrence and Mark Eaves, a couple of starters promoted to the varsity, they never got their offense moving and had totaled just 13 points at half to trail by two.

The second half was better, at least from the standpoint of scoring. Sikeston outscored Poplar Bluff 31-27 to claim the two point win. The two teams had been tied 25-25 entering that last frame.

Sikeston's jayvee team will face that same Poplar Bluff team Saturday evening at 8 o'clock for the championship of their own invitational junior varsity tournament. Poplar Bluff defeated Cape Central 45-44 in double overtime Wednesday evening to earn the right to play Sikeston. Sikeston took Charleston 52-40.

Sikeston's last conference game will be February 22nd for both the varsity and junior varsity when they travel to Cape Girardeau to play Cape Central.

possible under the circumstances and said: "You've taken a giant step forward."

Driver Edward Cherkoski responded: "You did a wonderful job for us, but we can't accept this agreement. It's all right for a three-year-old kid, but we're grown men with families ... Why can't the government cut taxes on fuel? We want a rollback and we want it now."

Before Shapp's arrival at the truck stop, Cherkoski's group, representing about 600 drivers, and groups in Allentown, Pa., and Columbia County voted to reject the agreement.

President Nixon's chief labor aide, W.J. Usery Jr., and Leonard Fleet, one of the negotiators for the truckers, predicted drivers would accept the agreement reached early Thursday morning.

But the pattern of voting by truckers' groups and statements from leaders of the protest indicated that no wholesale return to the road was in the offing.

"There has been no agreement," said Mike Parkhurst, editor of a trucking magazine and a strike leader. "The shutdown continues."

The agreement was rejected at truckers' meetings held Thursday and Friday at locations in Missouri, Connecticut, Illinois, Florida, Minnesota, Delaware, Arizona, and North and South Dakota.

The settlement reached in Washington included a government promise of all the diesel fuel the drivers needed, an immediate surcharge on freight rates to make up for recent fuel price hikes and the promise of future increases in freight rates.

Dear Mr. Terrell:

What a unique and delightful "All Night Sale" held at your store on Friday, January 25. I am sure it caught the imagination and attention of many Sikeston residents, as well as the surrounding communities.

We have heard many good reports about the "All Night Sale", the outstanding music furnished by Mr. Arnie Stone and the good refreshments served to everyone attending the sale. We also wish to extend our sincere thanks to Arnie Stone for the $16.64 he donated personally to the Missouri Special Olympics.

We are certainly grateful that you chose to donate the proceeds of this unusual sale to the Fifth Annual Missouri Special Olympics. Your gift of $113.00 will pay for lodging, food, insurance, uniforms, medals, etc. for 7 children from this area. Last year almost 200 children from Special Education classes and State Training Schools participated in the Regional Meet and 30 participants went on to the State Meet.

We are anticipating another successful Meet this year and are very appreciative of your support.

Cordially,
David Ragan

Tapes request denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge on Friday dismissed for the second time the Senate Watergate committee's request that the court order President Nixon to give it five presidential tape recordings.

"The public interest does not require that the President should be forced to provide evidence... to a Senate committee in order to furnish fuel for further hearings," U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell said in dismissing the committee's suit.

Gesell said a factor "of critical importance" in his decision was "the need to safeguard pending criminal prosecutions from the possibly prejudicial effect of pre-trial publicity."

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said the White House was "pleased to note that the Senate petition has been dismissed without prejudice. Judge Gesell's decision is in accordance with the President's view that the judicial process should be allowed to continue without undue publicity."

Gesell's ruling was issued hours after special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski and James D. St. Clair, President Nixon's Watergate lawyer, met to discuss Jaworski's demands for continued access to White House files.

Neither side would say whether any progress was made at the meeting.

Last Oct. 17, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica dismissed the Watergate committee's suit on the grounds it failed to demonstrate the court had jurisdiction.

The suit was revived when Congress passed a special bill resolving the jurisdictional problem. The case then was referred to Gesell.

Gesell rejected the President's contention that the courts have no power to decide disputes between a president and a committee of Congress. He said the Court of Appeals ruling directing Nixon to give tapes to Sirica had come down "squarely to the contrary" of Nixon's contention."

He also rejected the President's argument that he can assert a blanket, unreviewable claim of confidentiality for all presidential communications.

Local man missing in Tennessee

DYERSBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Dyer County authorities are searching the Obion River for two men they say could have driven off the James P. Lanier Memorial Bridge after the bridge collapsed on Jan. 27.

William Howell, 58, of Wynnburg in Lake County and Fred Burns, 52, of Sikeston, Mo., left Howell's home at 4 a.m. on Jan. 27 en route to northern Dyer County, but never arrived, said Chief Deputy Tommy Hribbs. The bridge collapsed about 6:30 a.m.

Hribbs said the two could have taken the route that would have taken them across the bridge. He said relatives have not seen the two since their departure from Howell's home.

Authorities began a search of the river Thursday.

Officials have said they are at a loss to explain why the concrete bridge collapsed.

Drink machine robbed of $2

Chalmer Dockins, 506 W. Gladys St., reported to police Friday that a soft drink machine at Quick Car Wash on Tanner Street had been broken into and a coin changer stolen sometime Thursday night.

Thieves pryed the padlock off the soft drink machine.

Dockins, owner of the car wash, told police about $2 was taken from the machine. The coin changer was valued at $85.

Volunteer policeman dismissed from force

Z. T. Jackson, a volunteer officer with the Sikeston Police Department, has been dismissed from the force.

Jackson says the dismissal came after he stopped a city councilman for a routine traffic violation. City officials say the dismissal came after a series of complaints against Jackson, with the one from the councilman being the latest.

Jackson was an unpaid member of the force who furnished his own car and equipment. He was not a member of the auxiliary police unit.

He said his dismissal came after he stopped Councilman Chuck Grant last Saturday night for having a defective headlight. When he pulled Grant over, Jackson said the councilman got out of his car, told him he had no business being in a police car and drove off.

Jackson said he went back to the station where other officers told him he should issue Grant a citation, but Jackson said he dropped the matter and told them he'd probably be fired Monday morning anyway.

On Monday morning three officers showed up where Jackson was working and demanded his badge and identification card, which Jackson turned over to them.

He said he went to see City Manager Bill Whitlock the next day and was told there had been several complaints against him by people he had arrested, although he said no names, except Grant's, were mentioned.

Whitlock told The Daily Standard that the incident with Grant "didn't have a thing to do with it (the firing)." He repeated that there had been several complaints against Jackson.

"He did a good job," Whitlock said, "but we felt we didn't need him any longer. We felt it best that we relieve him."

He said Grant did not demand that Jackson be fired.

Grant also said that he did not demand Jackson's firing, but did report the incident to Whitlock. He said he would have accepted the ticket if Jackson had given it to him.

Jackson said he had not been told of any complaints against him prior to his dismissal.

The only complaint he said he knew about involved the arrest of a drunk man in an automobile accident. He said he was forced to handcuff the man after he refused to go to the police car and then took a swing at Jackson.

Jackson said he was upset but "I don't blame the police department for what's happened."

He added that Police Chief Leon Culp and he had always been good friends, "but when strings are pulled upstairs, he has to move."

Danforth raps press

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Atty. Gen. John Danforth praised his staff and the Highway Patrol Friday for their actions in handling the truck blockades in Missouri this week, but had criticism for the news media.

Danforth said his staff had been working long hours in attempting to get the necessary court orders to halt the blockades through the legal system.

He said the action had been successful and "the fact is that this state is not shut down and never has been."

He characterized the media reporting of the truck blockades as "so lopsides and so distorted as to be completely inaccurate."

The press has been giving extensive coverage to remarks made by independent truckers, the attorney general said, with little coverage of the effective action his office has taken to deal with the situation.

A spokesman for Danforth said later the attorney general regretted newspaper space given to isolated cases of violence when the over-all situation in Missouri was under control.

Danforth's appearance in court to get preliminary injunctions against blockades and his meetings with truckers, along with Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps' meeting with truckers, were reported by the news media. Danforth has called two news conferences and Phelps, one, in connection with the truckers' blockades. All have been reported by the media.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Kermit Almstedt said a temporary injunction issued by Callaway County Circuit Court Judge John M. Cave Thursday was very broad and gave the state power to act in almost any situation in which traffic was impeded throughout the state.

The state should be open and vehicles should be moving across the state, Almstedt said, because "it's a very broad order."

Danforth said the state would not be bullied by the truckers. Even if violence is imminent, he said, any truckers denying a court order will be arrested and their vehicles impounded.

He emphasized that a small percentage of the independent truckers were involved in the blockades.

Every injunction served, he added, has been obeyed by the truckers.

However, Col. Sam Smith, superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, said there had been 12 to 15 arrests for violations of injunctions.

Ex-police chief runs for council

Arthur Bruce

Arthur Bruce, former chief of police of Sikeston, announces his candidacy for one of two seats on the Sikeston City Council, to be filled in the April 2 city election.

Chief Bruce, as he is still called by his friends, says he believes he can render service to the people of Sikeston as a member of the City Council.

Bruce, a life- long resident of Sikeston, served as a Staff Sergeant in the Army in World War II and saw overseas duy in the South Pacific.

Bruce was active in police work for more than 20 years. He served as president of the Southeast Missouri Peace Officers Association and was a member of the Missouri Peace Officers Association, the Chief of Police Association and the National Police Officers Association.

An active member of the American Legion and former member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Bruce is also a member of the Odd Fellows Lodge and has been active in civic affairs.

Bruce has long been an active worker in the city baseball program, including Little League, Junior Babe Ruth League, Senior Babe Ruth League, Connie Mack and independent league progams. He was the commissioner of the Junior Babe Ruth League and served as manager and coach throughout the junior baseball program.

Bruce lives with his wife Mata at 714 W. North St.

He served on the Missouri Crime Commission under Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

Bruce pledges that if he is elected he will serve the best interests of the people of Sikeston. He believes he has proved his interest in Sikeston and its development and that he is an ardent law and order man. If elected, he says his only desire is to serve the people of Sikeston.

Deal nixed by truckers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Groups of angry truckers rejected on Friday a deal worked out with government officials and said they would continue their protest shutdown until their demand for lower fuel prices was met.

Some increase in truck traffic was noted on the ninth day of the shutdown, and automakers said they would begin to recall a few of the more than 100,000 persons laid off because of the strike.

But violence continued and drivers meeting in truck stops and elsewhere accused negotiators of "selling out" in Washington.

"We are prepared to continue as long as it takes," declared Tommy Thompson, who said 300 of his fellow drivers met in Atlanta and voted unanimously to reject the agreement struck Thursday.

A similar vote was reported by 400 drivers in Michigan, where Gov. William G. Milliken ordered the National Guard placed on alert to head off any possible highway violence during the weekend.

Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama called out National Guard Military Police, Gov. Wendell R. Anderson of Minnesota placed his state police force on 12-hour shifts and Florida Gov. Reubin Askew pledged the use of police to escort moving convoys of trucks.

In Detroit, American Motors announced the recall of 7,100 workers at two plants and General Motors said it was recalling 2,200 persons at a Dayton, Ohio, plant. The automakers said the recalls were possible because delivery of needed parts by truck had resumed.

But there were still at least 100,000 out-of-work people because of the strike, and there were new layoffs.

A New York steel plant laid off 1,500 workers because it was not getting materials, and Westinghouse said it was furloughing 1,700 employes at four plants in Ohio and one in Kentucky.

Food suppliers in the South and Midwest said food shortages had not yet shown up, but could next week if the strike continues. There were scattered shortages reported in the Northeast.

The government estimated traffic up 20 per cent, and Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe said the Justice Department was investigating possible antitrust violations in connection with the strike.

Pennsylvania Gov. Milton J. Shapp, who participated in negotiations got a chilly reception Friday when he attemped to sell the package to drivers gathered at a truck stop in Bartonsville, Pa.

Shapp telegrammed President Nixon expressing strong dissatisfaction with Saxbe's intent to investigate civil action against strikers, and he told the assembled drivers, "To hell with Nixon."

About 125 drivers listened as Shapp, a former truck driver, described the agreement as the best

Delay draws stiff 320-year sentence

ST. LOUIS (AP) — One of the stiffest prison sentences ever handed down in federal court here was given to Dallas R. Delay Friday for his conviction on federal bank robbery charges in connection with last year's murder-extortions of a Grandin, Mo., banker and his family.

U. S. District Judge James H. Meredith sentenced Delay, 33, to 320 years in prison. He had been convicted on four charges by a jury last month in connection with the bank robbery and murders of Robert H. Kitterman, his wife, Bertha, and their teen-aged daughter, Roberta, in January of last year.

Delay and two other men, Jerry W. Rector, 21, and Lloyd D. Cowin, 20, are serving three life prison terms each on state murder convictions in connection with the incident.

Both Cowin and Rector are to be sentenced on the federal charges March 1. They pleaded guilty a few hours after Delay was convicted.

Kitterman, the president of the Bank of Grandin, and his wife and daughter were found tied to trees and shot to death after $10,850 was withdrawn by Kitterman from the bank in an extortion plot Jan. 17.

Meredith said the federal sentence would be served after Delay finished the state sentences.

A federal probation officer in St. Louis said that if Delay were ever paroled from his state sentences and began to serve the federal terms, he would not be eligible for parole for about 51 years.

Bond set to sign reorganization bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond, assuming control of the four-year struggle over government reorganization, will sign the reorganization bill next Wednesday.

Bond's office will begin working on the hundreds of transfers in the reorganization bill. New directors will have to be named for the 14 major departments and hundreds of divisions under those departments.

Reorganization began in 1969 with preliminary studies. The legislature, responding to a study by the state Reorganization (Little Hoover) Commission, put the 1972 constitutional amendment to the voters and it was approved overwhelmingly.

In the 1973 legislative session, a compromise bill, the result of months of committee study and floor debate in both houses, was vetoed by the governor.

A week ago another compromise bill, described by the governor as "clearly better" than the one he vetoed, was passed in the special legislative session.

Bond's office announced Friday he would sign the bill Wednesday in ceremonies in the Capitol rotunda at 1:30 p.m.

In just two short years our country will be celebrating its 200th birthday. What's your state doing to make this happy occasion a memorable one? CRIME PREVENTION WEEK

Crime fighting should not be confined to the police department. It is the duty of every U. S. citizen - as National Crime Prevention Week (February 10-16) emphasizes.

The growing menace and cost of crime becomes more serious with every passing year, and the need for grass roots support of year- round crime prevention programs is urgent. Now, as never before, each individual must do some soul-searching to discover if he has been guilty of disregarding the rights and property of others. Or has he been hesitant to get "involved" when his aid might have helped solve or prevent a crime? If the answer to any of these is "Yes", a shifting of personal priorities is in order.

Every crime from vandalism and shoplifting to bank robbery and murder should be of concern to all citizens -- if we don't care no one else will. Moral degeneration and destruction of organized, law-abiding society is the penalty for condoning lawlessness. Crime prevention is the business of police and law enforcement agencies. They need the support of a concerned citizenry everyday of every week in the year.

LOWDOWN ON HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE: IT CAN SHORTEN YOUR LIFE

We all need blood pressure. That's what moves blood throughout the circulatory system. It's similar to water pressure pushing the water through a garden hose. Blood pressure normally rises and falls with each beat of the heart. But when it goes up and stays up, you have what doctors call hypertension or, high blood pressure. And you're in trouble, along with the 23 million other Americans who suffer from this silent and mysterious killer.

High blood pressure is silent because there are no easily discernible symptoms. It's mysterious because, in 90 per cent of the cases, doctors don't know its cause. And the tragedy is that half of the people who have high blood pressure don't know it; of those who do, most are being treated inadequately or not at all.

The American Heart Association, and its Affiliates and Chapters across the nation, are determined to do something about this disease which can lead to two of the major cardiac killers — heart attack and stroke.

Substantial sums of money are being invested in heart research to solve the medical mystery of hypertension. For it is believed that finding the cause could bring us closer to a cure.

But the important message for all Americans is this: high blood pressure is easily detected and can usually be controlled.

Detection is as easy as a visit to your doctor. But Heart Associations realize that many Americans put off a visit to their doctor until they "feel sick." And, since you can have high blood pressure without knowing it, without feeling sick, Heart Associations are beginning to conduct screening programs throughout the year wherever people congregate — in schools, shopping centers, even at industrial plants. The goal: find hidden hypertensives and refer them to their doctors or to treatment programs in health centers or clinics.

Hypertension screening programs are just one of the many ways your Heart Fund dollars are put to work for you and for your heart by the Heart Association. This is just one good reason why you should give generously when your Heart Fund volunteer calls.

According to the News Digest, gloom purveyors love to call the United States the "sick" society. Because the U. S. fails to measure up to their utopian standards, they claim that revolutionary changes are necessary. Hardly ever do they mention some of the benefits of living in this nation.

We have the highest living standard in the world. Our national income equals that of the next six highest nations combined. While half of the world subsists on $100 per capita income a year, the U. S. enjoys an average of $3,600. Even the highly developed West European nations have per capita incomes of only about $1,600. Russians, living in an alleged "workers' paradise," average $800 a year. A mere six per cent of the world's population lives in the U. S. Yet it graduates as many from high school as all the nations in the world combined. We also have more college graduates than the total of all the other nations.

Professional pessimists often cite the number of American poor, some 15 per cent of our population. But if 15 per cent are poor, 85 per cent are not poor. Most countries would be pleased if they had such low poverty figures.

These facts are not intended as a way of bragging, but as a way to set the record straight.

MANSFIELD REPLIES

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield made good sense in his response to President Nixon's State of the Union message when he pointed out that "To excise Watergate and what it implies before it becomes fatal to liberty is a fundamental responsibility of this government."

That was a direct response to the President's plea that Congress bring its investigations to a prompt end because "One year of Watergate is enough."

In making that plea, the President indicated he feels the investigations are merely a vendetta aimed solely at him. They are not that except insofar as the President himself may have had responsibility for Watergate in any of its aspects. The real purpose of the congressional aspects of Watergate investigations is, as Mansfield clearly stated, to make sure the nation's electoral system is honest.

Those investigations, Mansfield said, probably will be concluded this year.

As for the crimes of Watergate, they cannot be put to rest by Congress. That is the task for the courts and the courts must take however long may be necessary to complete their work, for as Mansfield also pointed out, "there are no judicial shortcuts."

Regarding the President's accomplishments during the last five years, Mansfield gave credit where credit was due. He commended Secretary of State Henry Kissinger for his efforts in negotiating peace in Southeast Asia and in the Middle East. He complimented the President for calling an international conference on the energy shortage.

But he also made clear that Congress has had its successes, too, and that there is need for cooperation between the executive and legislative branches if the nation's work is to be done in the future.

He justifiably criticized the President for excessive curtailment of public information in the name of national security, attacks on the press, impoundment of funds, exercising sole authority over the budget, executive contempt for Conress and illegal invasions of privacy.

His case would have been stronger if he could have reported greater accomplishment on the part of Congress in the fields of election campaign reforms and self- discipline over spending of federal funds. But he did appeal to the nation for support of legislation to give the nation "a new system of open elections, openly paid for."

While there may have been tinges of partisanship in the Mansfield response to the President, it was on the whole a balanced and intelligent statement. If the Democratic leadership in Congress can build its performance this session on that foundation, this should be a most constructive year for the nation.

MUST ACT AS PEOPLE ORDERED

In 1972 the people of Missouri voted to eliminate the intangible tax, and the tax on household goods, the latter considered by many a nuisance tax.

The Legislature has already done as it was told to do, and eliminated the intangible tax.

Now it is attempting to eliminate the household goods tax, but is being opposed by Gov. Bond on the grounds that repeal of the tax will mean too much revenue loss for local institutions, including schools, counties, cities

We agree it will be difficult to find other means of getting the tax money that now comes in from levies on household goods, and that which has come in from intangible taxes.

Neither do we believe it should have been ordered repealed by the voters. All of us know too many people who have thousands of dollars invested in household articles as an investment, because certain types are rapidly increasing in value, and we believe it should be taxed just as other property is taxed.

But - we believe in letting the people decide, and even though we don't agree, we think the Legislature should do as the people told it to do - repeal the household tax. Our Legislatures can do nothing else, it seems to us, if Missouri is to live up to its motto that the will of the people is supreme.

DRIVING IN A FOG

There should be a law, or maybe there is, forbidding anyone driving in a fog such as we had last week, without any headlights showing, or even with parking lights. With the latter, the illumination is so faint, it amounts to nearly nothing when it comes to warning those who meet such a car. We came in from the Nursing Home Friday morning at 10 o'clock, nearly collided with two cars which had no headlights at all, and had to strain our eyes for the one with just parking lights.

ANOTHER NEEDLESS SHORTAGE

What leaders of the aerospace industry have feared is now coming to pass. Layoffs in the aerospace and electronics industries, coupled with an antitechnology "campaign" are bearing their bitter fruits. An AP dispatch from Washington, D. C., reports that enrollment in engineering schools during the past year has dropped severely and "... could add up to a shortage of engineers in 1975."

The dispatch quotes the Dean of the College of Engineering at Pennsylvania State University who comments: "Engineering will never become obsolete. National statistics indicate there will be a shortage of new engineers in four years if high school graduates do now show a renewed interest." The Dean of UCLA school of engineering and applied science predicts that by mid-1970's, engineers will be as scarce and as courted by employers as they were in the heydays of the 1960's. He estimates that between now and 1975 the country will need 60,000 to 70,000 new engineers each year. But only about half that number is expected to graduate.

These are the trained people that representatives of the aerospace industry have said hold the key to solution of the massive social, economic and environmental problems that today threaten to rend the fabric of our civilization. Paradoxically, hostility to science and technology -- and engineers -- has greatly multiplied those problems.

STANDING AROUND

Yes, we stand by the office of the President, as a page advertisement carried by many daily newspapers calls upon the people to do. But does our President stand by that office? The advertisement was signed by a large number of big name Republicans and was supposed to arouse sympathy of the public for what is being brought out against the President of the United States. There was no "Watergate" when Dweight Eisenhower was President, nor Coolidge nor any other Republican Presidents in the past except Warren Harding. His Teapot Dome scandal resulted in his death while in office, believed by many to have been suicide because of the scandal created by a member of his cabinet. Yes, the office of the President of the United States was the greatest national leadership in the world until just now. What are we going to do about it? Mr. Nixon could resign and let Vice - President Ford take over the office. We believe that the nation would be behind him. We hope the House of Representatives will vote for impeachment soon. That, we believe, would bring Mr. Nixon's resignation.

THE SPECTACLE THAT WASN'T

Acclaimed by the astronomers, heralded and headlined by the news media, the comet Kohoutek was expected to be the sky spectacle of the century.

Now they tell us it is unexpectedly fading and there'll be no more spectacle.

But there were no visible signs of distress in this area because of that.

At its most brilliant stage, those who saw it claimed it was no brighter than most any of the larger stars that are to be seen on any clear evening, and most times it appeared no more of a spectacle than a burning match a hundred yards or so away.

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON & LES WHITTEN SAYS:

The 'Puppy Mills'

WASHINGTON-- Mass breeders of $200 million worth of puppies and kittens are shipping sick and dying animals to America's children with the active cooperation of a few crooked veterinarians.

Of $310 million in pet sales each year, a Humane Society of the United States study estimates that two- thirds are products of "puppy mills" where pups are often treated worse than cabbages (and are actually shipped two- to- a- cabbage- crate for long distances).

The year- long secret probe was headed by Humane Society chief gumshoe Frank McMahon. Often working undercover, he found dogs starving in transit, freezing in airplane holds, sold with hideous diseases and shuddering with trauma and neuroses.

Most of these helpless would- be pets were whelped in Midwest "puppy mills" where dogs are bred on a mass production basis and shipped to pet stores all over the country. Most of the "mills" are "operated with one single goal: money," the report says. The wages of such greed, says the society document, are "coccidiosis, distemper, bronchitis, hookworms, roundworms and...exposure."

The "puppy mills" are able to get the ill dogs and cats shipped because "some veterinarians take the breeder's word that an animal is healthy and others sign a stack of blank (health) certificates for the breeder to fill in."

Even some respectable mail order houses are criticized by the Humane Society which charges that the "Spiegel catalog offers animals sight unseen-- unseen by Spiegl, too, as the animals are shipped directly from the puppy mill to the buyer without going through Spiegel's hands."

But the most heartless treatment occurs in C. O. D. shipments. There, if one animal is sick, the pet store simply refuses the whole shipment and the weary animals are sent the long road home to the puppy mill, often dying on the way from illness or starvation.

In his travels, investigator McMahon found a Virginia store which sold a kitten to a seven- year- old child. The kitten died four days later of distemper yet the pet store owner refused a veterinarian's plea to stop selling other kittens exposed to the deadly virus.

In Greensboro, N. C., a veterinarian reported every one of several hundred puppies he had examined as they arrived from puppy mills had bronchitis. In two California towns, 300 pets were found in various pet stores, but half were dead and many others were ill.

In one undercover job, our intern, Rae Nelson, went out on a "buy" of a handsome Doberman from a "reputable" pet shop. When Ms. Nelson and the society took the $250 dog to a veterinarian, it was diagnosed as having a lung infection.

Although federal laws administered by the Agriculture Department outlaw shady dog shippers, the federal inspectors are spread too thin to do much good. And only Illinois, the society found, has a puppy protection law with any fangs in it. There, pet shops are inspected, and some 2,500 complaints a year are registered and investigated.

Another result of mass production is that dogs sold as "purebreds" may appear aristocratic as sad- eyed pups, but grow up into lovable, but outrageous- looking mongrels. This is because of slipshod breeding at the mills.

"With 1.75 million applications handled last year, it is still possible for breeders and pet shop operators to take unethical advantage of the appeal that "American Kennel Club registered' and 'with papers' have for the buying public," says the soon- to- be- published study.

To counter the traffic in canine and feline misery, the society recommends buying dogs bred in your own area where you can visit the kennels, or better yet, settling for a friendly mutt in your local animal shelter who, otherwise, must be put to death.

FOOTNOTE: A Spiegel spokesman said they had been shipping puppies for 15 years at a rate of about 3,000 per year and average no more than five complaints a year. The kennels are carefully inspected, said the spokesman, and Spiegel had a money- back guarantee policy.

TAX BACKSCRATCH: While the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation investigates the IRS, the IRS has been pampering the committee by providing man- to- man assistance for members needing help on their tax returns. The White House gets the same kind of front- door service.

Among the committee members who accepted the services of the IRS Capitol Hill tax team are chairman Wilbur Mills, D- Ark., and Reps. Al Ullman, D- Ore., and Harold Collier, R- Ill., and Sen. Carl Curtis, R- Neb. Members huffily insist that this IRS hand- holding has no effect on how tough they are on IRS.

Perhaps embarrassed by their own special handling, the joint committee recommended a few months ago in an official report that IRS inform "each individual taxpayer...of the availability of free tax return preparation service...."

Responded the IRS: "Limited manpower resources prevent the Service from offering free tax return preparation service to all taxpayers. Instead, IRS emphasizes the technique of self- help, whereby taxpayers prepare and complete their own returns with instructions and assistance from Service employees."

In other words, no one need apply except pooh- bahs.

FBI Hunts Gunslingers: Highway Civil War Looms After Terrorist Shoot Out Eye Of Teamster

PITTSBURG -- What's an eye worth? Ask the Teamsters member, Local 391, Greensboro, N. C., who had one shot out as he was earning his daily bread on terror-ridden, besieged, Molotov- cocktail strewn highways of this land of the free.

And one truck driver is dead. Atty. Gen. Saxbe says this death has been attributed to the over- the - road violence. A state of emergency, mobilization of the National Guard, bloodshed and destruction in 40 states, immobilization of food and layoffs of thousands have cost the public tens of millions of dollars.

Saxbe has conferred with FBI Director Clarence Kelley. All FBI headquarters and 94 U.S. Attorneys have been alerted to search out instances of violent interference with, and damage to, commerce and violations of the Hobbs Anti- Racketeering Act.

Flying squads still roam the turnpikes. Inside the White House and in Bill Simon's energy headquarters they called it a rebellion. Hysteria shook the House and Senate Commerce Committees. Teamsters Brotherhood president Frank Fitzsimmons wryly told a friend: "If it were the Teamsters union they'd have clapped us in prison, called us gansters and murderers. Instead our men are being hounded from the highways which are our bread and butter."

Many Teamsters did their daily runs-- with guns ready. No one wants his eye shot out, nor maiming by flying windshield glass,nor burns from Molotov cocktails.

The other day Dick Nixon's upsurging special assistant on labor trouble shooting, Bill Usery, Federal Mediation chief, was in Bill Simon's office, asking aloud of no one in particular: "Who do you deal with in this drivers' strike?"

It's incredible. There is no central organizatin. There are probably 40 organizations of owner-driver big rig independent operators.

Some of the responsible ones--17 men and one woman met secretly on Jan. 4 in Cleveland's Sheration Hotel. They put out a statement. Called for action. Decided to meet again in Washington. Warned of the Jan. 31 shutdown. Some of them represented independents who belonged to the Teamsters union. Most didn't. But who does speak for the 100,000 powerful owner-driver entrepreneurs of the open roads?

It's incredible. No one speaks for all of them. Yet many claim that right. Who are the terrorists, the flying squads bloodying up the ever- stretching concret ribbons?

Further, who supervises tens of thousands of them? No one, actually. The Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) covers some of them-- the so-called hard freight haulers. But ICC doesn't control or regulate the exempt carriers-- and these owner- drivers haul, it now appears, the bulk of the nation's food supplies. And can cut off by terror the remainder carried by fleet owners. Thus the haulers of fish, meat, poultry and produce -- the nation's basic foods -- are exempt from ICC regulation.

Why? The owner- drivers, and the force they can muster, and the rebellion, reveal them as a crucial part of our economy-- the purveyors to your own kitchen, institutions, schools, hospitals, the very core of this nation's life. Supposedly the Cost of Living Council, under Prof. John Dunlop's direction, controls the exempt drivers' fees.

But, as is characteristic, the Council spokesmen ducked all questions. They're specialists at this. Most of them don't know a rig from a rib roast. So the Council, too, was caught short.

These owner-drivers now show themselves as a powerful force-- strong enough to have Fitzsimmons demand police action, demand prosecution in the strongest terms printable-- on advice of counsel Charles (Chuck) Colson.

But basically the owner-drivers are a debt-ridden band. Their profit margins are slimmer than a roadside hamburger.

Their rigs cost anywhere from $35,000 to $50,000 each. They are in debt to the bank. They struggle with heavy insurance. If a tire blows, or there is a serious breakdown, or the snows ice up the Pennsylvania Turnpike and they jack- knife and are frozen in for a few days, they lose the whole profit on a regular run -- or several runs. Most are damn good men.

Then they were gouged by diesel fuel distributors. And the owner-drivers to survive needed two concessions-- the right to pass the increased costs to the shipper who hired them and guarantee of a hundred per cent of their fuel needs at controlled prixes (or rolled back).

Since they are the conduit of food to your dinner table tonight, they deserve to earn a living. But not at the price of terror. They aren't hoboes of the road. They are collectively a big business. There should be an immediate study made to provide them with a bureau in the Department of Trnasportation to which to turn.

Otherwise they'll be out roaming the highways again in two or three months. It's all too costly. Food prices are high enough without artificial scarcities. Time has come to cut through this jungle. And what's an eye worth?

Three bound over to Circuit Court

CHARLESTON -- Preliminary hearings Thursday before Magistrate T. J. Brown Jr. resulted in three persons being bound over to Circuit Court for appearances on Feb. 12.

Ronnie Lane of East Prairie was bound over on an armed robbery charge and remains in custody in lieu of $5,000 bond. He is accused of taking $130 from the cash register of the Friendly Market in East Prairie on Jan. 15 while holding a pistol on Mrs. Carolyn Jackson.

Mrs. Jackson was the only witness at the preliminary. According to her testimony, she was in the store after closing time at 10 p.m. when a man knocked on the door. Although she did not know the man's name, Mrs. Jackson said his face was familiar and she let him in. He asked for a carton of soft drinks and when she rang up the sale and the cash register opened, she said the man pulled out a small, chrome-plated pistol and demanded the money.

After she refused twice to give him the money, Mrs. Jackson said he leaned across the counter and took the bills from the register and, after warning her not to call out because someone was watching, the man left.

On cross examination, Mrs. Jackson described the man as being of medium build, about 5 feet, 7 inches tall, with light hair and a mustache. When asked how she could be sure Lane was the man in question, she said, "When someone points a gun at you, you can't forget the face."

Bruce Edward Jinkerson of Zalma was bound over following a preliminary hearing on a charge of distributing a controlled substance (LSD) to a minor. He remains in custody under $10,000 bond.

Jinkerson also was sentenced to 10 days in jail on an improper registration charge and 10 days on a charge of failure to have his operator's license on his person. The sentences are to run concurrently and he was given credit for time served. Costs in the cases were certified to the county.

Following a preliminary on a charge of assault with intent to kill, Stanford Nevels of Wyatt was also bound over to Circuit Court. He is free on $1,500 bond.

Sam Rigney of Wyatt, who Nevels is accused of cutting on the left side of the face with a knife, was the only witness. The incident allegedly occurred Jan. 19 at the rear of the Charlie Jackson Tavern in Wyatt.

Rigney testifed he, Nevels and some other men were drinking the night in question and there was a disagreement between he and Nevels which resulted in the knifing.

Rigney was reluctant about naming the other men who might have witnessed the incident. He said he was positive Nevels had cut him but he could not remember seeing the knife.

Irene Bailey pleaded not guilty to a charge of common assault and trial was set for Feb. 14. She is accused of assulting Marilyn Given by hitting her with a purse on Feb. 1 and is free on $500 bond.

A charge of disturbing the peace brought a suspended 30-day jail sentence to Lawrence Smith on condition he remain away from the premises of his wife and pay $23 court costs.

Bill Jeffords of Marston was fined $117.50 on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

In a civil suit, First National Bank of Cape Girardeau received judgment for possession of a 1968 automobile, plus costs in a security agreement suit brought against Johnnie Giles of Charleston.

A charge of driving with expired license plates against Calvin Leroy Hancock of Matthews was continued to Feb. 14. Charges of driving while intoxicated and driving while license is revoked against Robert M. Tubbs of Charleston were also continued to Feb. 14.

Charges of driving while intoxicated and driving while operator's license is revoked against Roger D. Scott of East Prairie were continued to Feb. 21.

Other court action and fines this week included:

Dixie Lee Counts, driving without an operator's license, $21; Donald Burcks, non-support payments reduced from $20 to $10 per week; Delta Loan and Finance Co. received judgment in a promissory note suit of $139.50 with interest and $13 costs from Ronnie and Mary Wagner.

Missouri Delta Community Hospital received judgment of $138.15 with interest and $15 costs in an account suit against J. T. and Catherine Latamondeer and a judgment of $159.75 with interest and $14 costs in an account suit against Loyce Johnston.

Mouser heads gambling opposition

BLOOMFIELD — Stoddard County Sheriff Ralph Mouser was elected chairman of the Stoddard County chapter of Missourians Against Legalized Gambling in an organizational meeting held Thursday night in the basement of Trinity United Methodist Church.

Loren Coffey of Dexter was elected vice chairman; the Rev. Lester Clayton of Dexter, secretary; and the Rev. James Pike of Bloomfield, treasurer.

Mouser stated that the newly organized chapter, coordinated through the Christian Civic Foundation based in St. Louis, will attempt to provide data against gambling for all Stoddard Countians.

According to Mouser, Rep. Jerry T. Howard of Dexter told him he would definitely vote against bills to legalize gambling before the State Legislature. Rep. C. F. Cline of Sikeston will also be contacted by the chapter for a statement on the matter.

In the last session of the General Assembly, Mouser said a bill for legalized gambling was defeated by only one vote. An all-out effort will be necessary to compete with the St. Louis- Kansas City areas which have been favorable to the bills.

Mouser said it appears that out-state Missouri will be the deciding factor in whether or not the state will have legalized gambling.

Chapter members stated they thought the issue will be brought before voters in a special election, and if this happens they will be prepared to fight against the gambling proposals.

A difference of two degrees lower in winter and higher in summer in heating and air-conditioning units in U.S. homes could save the equivalent of 100 million tons of coal per year, says Arthur D. Little, head of a research and management consulting firm.

Ann Landers

Ex-sister-in-law's picture must go

Dear Ann Landers: My brother and his wife were divorced recently. When we redecorated our home (seven years ago) we planned the living room around a beautiful photographic portrait of his bride and hung it up on the most important wall. It is a very large picture and we bought a fantastically expensive frame for it.

My brother will undoubtedly marry again. When he does we will, of course, take down the portrait of his former wife. But what should we do about it in the meantime? If we take the picture down we will have to redecorate again. There's a hole behind it the size of a grapefruit.-- Baffled In Ballard

Dear Baff: Your ex- sister-in- law's bridal picture has got to go. NOW. Have another photographic portrait made of your husband or your children. Or-- buy a replica of a painting by one of the old masters and place it in that frame.

Dear Ann Landers: We can all use little bits and pieces of philosophy to get us through a bad day. A few years ago I clipped something out of the paper and carried it with me to read when I got to feeling blue. I don't know where it came from and it is so badly worn I can just barely read it. Will you print it in your column so I will have a fresh copy? I'll bet many others will profit from it as well.

On this day--
Mend a quarrel.
Search out a forgotten friend.
Dismiss a suspicion and replace it with trust.
Encourage someone who has lost faith.
Keep a promise.
Forget an old grudge.
Examine your demands on others and vow to reduce them.
Fight for a principle.
Express your gratitude.
Overcome an old fear.
Take two minutes to appreciate the beauty of nature.
Tell someone you love him.
Tell him again.
And again.
And again.
-- A Reader In Scottsbluff, Nebraska

Dear Reader: Here it is. Again. You clipped it from my column and I am delighted you asked for a rerun.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm writing about my 46- year- old mother who looks 35 and acts 17. Dad died two years ago of liver trouble (booze) and she put up with plenty. Now she is making up for lost time. At present she has a 30- year- old unemployed poet living with her.

Our children 6 and 8 adore "Gram." My husband says I can't take the girls to her home because of the "immoral set-up." Last night he announced she isn't welcome here, even if she comes alone. Is he justified?-- Torn Up

Dear T.: It's awfully hard to raise a 46- year- old mother, so tell your husband to keep the latchstring out and his opinions to himself. It's perfectly O. K. for a widow to have friends, even "unemployed poets."

Drugs; How much is too much? Is pot O. K.? Is L. S. D. too much? If you're on dope or considering it, get Ann Landers's new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs." For each booklet ordered, send a dollar bill plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (16c postage) to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 3346, Chicago, Ill. 60654.

Successful persons share their secrets

By Sharen K. Hunt
Area Home Economist

Some families always seem to "get the breaks" in life. How they do it was the topic of a study done by Reuben Hill, sociology professor at University of Minnesota in Minneapolis. He interviewed 104 three-generation families about relationships, plans, arguments, etc. About one-fourth of these families were considered successful, or managed well.

Luck wasn't the reason because these families "had certain ways of handling their time, talents and money, so as to gain the things in life they want most." Hill's key findings might be guidelines for families and those about to marry.

Marrying after 25 meant ending up with better homes and more stimulating jobs, for the men in the study.

Most of the "successful" families had no more than two children. Hill thinks this pattern relates to the idea of social placement. Today, education determines jobs more than family, so with fewer children, more can be invested in their education.

Be prepared to cope with the unexpected. According to the Reader's Digest summary of this research, two-thirds of all the changes -- moves, jobs, purchases, savings -- weren't predicted three months in advance. The families that adapted to change most easily were those that had a set of "family policies", a kind of informal game plan.

These might be ordinary and obvious, but the successful families were consistent.

The families that are happiest with their decisions are the ones that have discussed them the most. Sometimes, decisions turn out to be wrong, but since they were argued and discussed, it helps families accept the results. They learn from their mistakes.

Choose decision- maker wisely - Hill says that husband and wife and maybe older children make decisions in the more successful families. In each family though, there is usually one who has better judgment in some things and families profit by being aware and agreeable to that arrangement.

Rely on your relatives - Relatives were utilized by successful families for advice, counseling, economic help and child care. There are mixed feelings about this dependence, but how well this keeps generations together depends on the middle generation.

All in all, this study of three-generation families showed the family structure is resilient and can survive and grow. The families that manage well, are thoughtfully organized, with good communication and take advantage of available help.

"All happy families resemble one another, every unhappy family is unhappy in its own way." Tolstoy.

Mini-Farm wives meet, plan to organize club

A group of 14 housewives, all residents of Sikeston Mini- Farms, met Wednesday morning at the home of Mrs. Charles (Judy) Williams for coffee, conversation and to acquaint themselves with each other and their families.

Over 50 families now live in the Mini- Farms development and, although most are from Sikeston, many of the families did not know each other.

The women discussed plans to organize later and include working women.

The group discussed the advantages of living at the Mini- Farms, with less traffic, and disadvantages such as being away from handy grocery stores.

One of the group's main subjects was car pools. Many of the mothers take children into town daily to kindergarten, and they discussed the possibility of starting car pools to conserve energy and save time.

What's the law?

The case of the faithful spouse

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Bert's marriage went from ideal to ordeal. After 20 years of wedded bliss, his wife suddenly began to accuse him of running around with other women.

Actually, however, Bert was as faithful as a hound dog. Unfortunately, no matter what he said, he was unable to convince his green- eyed wife to the contrary. Consequently, he finally sued to end their marriage on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment.

"My wife's constantly after me like a mosquito after a nudist," he complained in court. "And I can't take it any more. If I conducted even half of the affairs she accuses me of, I'd be a caterer."

"So, I'm suspicious," responded Bert's wife. "That's no grounds to end a marriage. It's too trivial a matter. Almost all wives suspect their husbands of a little hanky- panky. That's not cruel and inhuman treatment, that's life."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you free faithful Bert from his suspicious wife?

This is how the Judge ruled: YES! The judge held that a wife constantly accusing her husband of infidelity and carousing cannot fairly be characterized as trivial. And, when it affects his state of health, concluded the judge, he cannot be required to endure it indefinitely.

Pathologist says soybean diseases getting worse

COLUMBIA — Soybean disease problems are getting worse, a University of Missouri-Columbia plant pathologist reported Wednesday.

When soybeans were first introduced to this country, said Einar Palm, they were practically free from serious diseases. Now they are plagued by diseases that affect every part of the plant.

"Further in- depth research to control these diseases should have high priority," Palm told growers attending the state soybean conference.

State extension plant pathology and agronomy specialists, working cooperatively with area extension specialists, are monitoring diseases in strategic soybean growing areas. Their findings and recommendations are transmitted to growers and specialists via tele- reports, radio and newsletters.

The worst soybean disease in Missouri is charcoal rot. "It infects almost every soybean field in the state," said Palm. "Losses may hit 40 per cent or more in individual fields."

Until recently, experts thought charcoal rot hit only mature plants and was induced mainly by hot, dry weather. But Thomas Wyllie, UMC plant pathology researcher, showed the disease can infect young plants, even seedlings, and even without hot, dry weather.

"Controlling this disease will be very difficult," said Wyllie. "We are now studying how it infects the plant.

Estate planning short courses set

PERRYVILLE — A farm estate planning short course will be held in Perryville in February. The three- session short course, sponsored by the Perry County University of Missouri Extension Center, will begin next Wednesday and resume Feb. 20 and 27 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Perry Plaza meeting room.

Curt Vogel, an attorney, will discuss the legal aspects in estate planning at the first session; Francis Toohey, an attorney, will talk about probate procedures, requirements and costs at the second meeting and Cletis Hanebrink, a Social Security representative, will discuss Social Security requirements and benefits at the third session.

The short course is open to the public but will be oriented to farm and small business owners. The registration fee is $4.50 and covers both husband and wife. Registration blanks may be obtained at the University of Missouri Extnesion Center and several local businesses in Perryville.

For further information, contact your county extension center. In Perryville, phone 547-4504; Jackson, 243-3581; Marble Hill, 238-2420.

Fertilize pastures now, expect quick returns

Now is an excellent time to fertilize established pastures. Livestock owners who top-dress now can expect quick returns. Normally, fall growth can be doubled or tripled. This added fall growth means extra pasture during the late fall and early winter and a saving on high priced hay. Top- dressing at this time also improves the chances of a good seed crop for next spring.

There are several reasons for good response to summer top- dressing treatments. Missouri weather, the nature of grass, and fertility are all involved. It takes as much or more fertility to grow grass as corn. Pastures that have been grazed all season or had a hay crop removed have already used as much fertility as a corn crop.

Normally, late summer brings rain and cooler temperatures. When soil temperatures are cool and moisture is present, grasses such as fescue and orchard grass start to grow. In order to get optimum growth, the fertility needs to be high. With an adequate top- dressing treatment now, the fertility will be there when moisture and temperatures are favorable.

Based on research at Southwest Research Center at Mount Vernon, it appears that a top- dressing treatment of 300 to 500 pounds of 20-10-20 per acre now and another 300 to 500 pounds of 20-10-20 per acre in the winter would give optimum yields of both forage and seed on tall fescue.

Treatment use in research varied from no nitrogen to 120 pounds of nigrogen at a time. Nitrogen was applied in December, March, June and August. Phosphate treatments varied from none to 100 pounds top- dressed annually in addition to a broadcast applications at seeding of 0 to 400 pounds of actual phosphate.

Potash treatments varied from 0 to 200 pounds top-dressed annually, in addition to a broadcast treatment at seeding time varying from 0 to 400 pounds of actual potash.

On nitrogen plots the top yields were received where the grass received 60 to 100 pounds of nitrogen per acre in both late summer and December.

On the phosphate plots, the top yields were the plots receiving 50 to 100 pounds of actual phosphate annually as a top- dressing.

On the potash plots, the top yields were the plots receiving 100 to 200 pounds of actual potash annually as a top-dressing.

Combining the figures from this research adds up to 60 to 90 pounds of nitrogen in the summer and again in the winter for a total annual application of 120 to 180 pounds.

$7,200 research program is effort to improve yields

COLUMBIA — A $7,200 research program at the University of Missouri has been announced as part of a nationwide effort to improve soybean yields.

The proposal, submitted by David Johnson, University of Missouri, was only one of five approved out of a total of 29 proposals submitted to the American Soybean Assn. (ASA) Research Foundation.

The research project will concentrate on nitrogen fixation and nitrogen uptake from the soil in relation to supply, movement and distribution of carbohydrates in soybeans.

The check was presented by Dennis Blankenship, representing the ASA Research Foundation.

"The ASA Research Foundation is investing approximately $100,000 in soybean research this year. We conducted a nationwide search to find the best qualified and best equipped scientist available.

"This money comes straight from the growers and the soybean industry. So we do not believe it should be used for buildings or equipment. We're simply buying the best brainpower available," said Blankenship.

The research foundation funds only projects of national or broad regional significance, and the majority of funds come from states on the basis of one-half cent per acre of soybean production.

"The research funds are distributed on the basis of what research needs to be done first and what scientist or institution can best perform that research," Blankenship added.

Agronomist suggests small grain herbicides

Producers of wheat and other small grains have an annual problem with certain broadleaved weeds such as vetch, mustard, docks and wild onion or garlic.

These weeds can be controlled with 2,4-D if applied at the right time. Apply ½ to ¾ lb/A of 2,4-D acid equivalent. The lower rate is for the ester form of 2,4-D and the higher rate is for the amine form. The ester form may be more injurious to the crop but is more effective on wild onion. Low volatile esters should be used to reduce the drift hazard.

Applications can be made from tillering to the joint stage of growth, but not before plants are four inches tall and not later than early boot. A 2,4-D application should not be put on small grain seedlings or during the boot to dough stage of kernel development. Such applications will result in reduced yields.

Best results can be expected if 2,4-D is applied after tillering on warm, sunny days or when temperature is above 60 degrees and when no rain is expected for 12 hours.

A 2,4-D treatment will not completely control wild onion or garlic but a ½ to 1.0- pound rate will prevent seed and aeriel bulblets.

A 2,4-D application can also be used as a pre- harvest application to kill broadleaved weeds emerging above the grain. A rate of one to 1½ pounds should be used. As weeds approach maturity they require a higher rate of application for effective kill.

The above treatments may kill legumes under- seeded in small grain unless the weed canopy is such that it affords protection from the herbicide.

Dam is weapon against flooding

Water, like fire, is a friend to man -- when it's under control. But runaway waters, like runaway fires, bring heartache and destruction. Basements get flooded, crops ruined, roads damaged and bridges destroyed.

Floods, like fires, are best stopped before they start. We can't turn rain on and off like the water from a faucet in the kitchen sink . . . but we can trap and hold it.

A floodwater detention structure is one of the weapons against floods. It holds thousands of gallons of water. During heavy rains, water from surrounding land is trapped behind the strong earth dam. Then the trapped water drains slowly away through a tube, making room for hthe next big rain.

You'll see more and more structures such as this as progressive communities act to stop flood damages. Some will hold water back for irrigation, city water supply, fishing, wildlife and recreation.

Perhaps there's one near you -- or should be. Why don't you check with the supervisors of your local Soil Conservation District?

Officials can't confirm wheat delay agreement

WASHINGTON (AP)— Top Nixon farm officials say they are unable to confirm reports that the Soviet Union has agreed to delay taking a substantial quantity of U. S. wheat that had been ordered for delivery this fiscal year.

But the Agriculture Department will issue a weekly report on exports Friday that might provide an answer, listings which showed that as of Jan. 20- the most recent tabulation- the Soviets still had 32.5 million bushels of wheat to be delivered by June 30.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz told a reporter Wednesday that he had "no confirmation" that Russia had agreed this week to delaying the deliveries until the new U. S. harvest comes in next summer.

Pressure to get the Soviets to delay remaining wheat deliveries has been exerted through private U. S. exporters who have been urged to seek postponements and by government- to- government requests to Moscow.

Vladimir S. Alkhimov, Soviet deputy foreign trade minister, had been quoted earlier as saying the delay in 1973- 74 wheat exports had been approved.

If so, the denial of knowledge by Butz could point to postponements worked out through the private export trade with the Russians and not by official government agreements.

Don Pearlberg, USDA director of economics, said he knew only of trade reports concerning Alkimov's statement. But if true, he said, the delay would help assure the United States enough wheat until harvest in May and June.

"I think it would change the psychology of the market so that people who are holding wheat for the high dollar will start letting it go," Paarlberg told a reporter.

Paarlberg testified Monday before a Senate subcommittee that he saw no possibility of a flour or bread shortage if markets are kept open and export controls avoided.

If it turns out that Russia has agreed to postpone delivery of approximately 30 million bushels of wheat this season, that would boost the prospective reserve, or carryover, next July 1 to about 218 million bushels from 178 million USDA espects now.

That would still be among the smallest reserves on record, but Paarlberg and others think it would be more than enough to satisfy U. S. requirements until the new crop is ready.

WASHINGTON (AP)— Farmers, looking ahead to potential record production in 1974, bought record quantities of fertilizer during the first half of the current crop year, according to industry officials.

The Fertilizer Institute, in a report for last July- December production and use, said U. S. production rose 7 per cent from a year earlier. But the report showed shipments for domestic use during the six months climbed 15 per cent.

Edwin M. Wheeler, institute president, said that inventories at manufacturing plants were down 43 per cent from a year earlier as of Dec. 31, 1973.

Wheeler said the record demand for fertilizer was tied directly "to the unusual pressures on farmers to produce more food and fiber and to prospective high crop prices" in 1974.

Pork producers discuss hog farm

BENTON — The Scot County Pork Producers Association discussed a proposed confinement hog farm that could produce 2.5 million hogs at Monday night's meeting in the courthouse. The proposed hog farm would be built in northeast Missouri, in Clark County, adjacent to the Santa Fe Railroad on approximately 7,500 acres of land.

Ronnie Burger, president of the county organization, spoke about the possiblility after hearing Charles McQuoid speak at the Missouri Pork Producers Association's annual meeting recently in Columbia.

McQuoid is a native of Memphis, Mo., in Scotland County, is an insurance man who came up with the plan for the super hog farm.

Burger said there has been an almost invoiuntary reaction that there is something inherently evil about such a large operation that might replace hundreds of smaller hog farms.

Burger said that whether the plant will become a reality in Clark County, in McQuoid's opinion, hinges on obtaining an adequate water supply. About two million gallons a day would be needed for both the production and processing plants.

"There are some people who think the giant operation may be the best thing that could happen to the pork industry, and others who feel that labor walkouts will be the downfall," Burger said.

Burger quoted McQuoid as saying he does not believe the operation will affect local farmers because they are self-contained and will not be sellilive animals on the open market.

Burger said McQuoid began a program like this back in 1950 but it failed because it was just on a verbal agreement, and now he has a written one.

Burger said McQuoid has $105 million dollars to help finance his operation. He plans to employ 900 people with 70 per cent of them to be women. McQuoid believes women will pay closer attention to newborn animals than men. He also plans to hire an additional 3,000 people in feeding the hogs and doing various other jobs.

Woods does it again

INGLEWOOD, Calif. AP — Massive George Woods formerly of Sikeston, Mo., broke the world indoor shot put record and achieved the longest throw in history, indoors or outside, with a mark of 72 feet, 2¾ inches Friday night at the Times Indoor Games.

The 310-pound Woods, of Carbondale, Ill., cracked the record of 70-4½ he set last Friday night in San Francisco. Woods had held the previous mark of 69-10¾, which he set Jan. 26 in Portland, Ore.

The former Southern Illinois strongman uncorked the throw on his first attempt against a three-man field.

Woods, big throw contained so much power that the leather-covered 16-pound steel ball bounced over a restraining net at the Forum and rolled into the stands.

Ramsey teams with Gibson

ORAN — Coach Mark Rascher's Parma Pirates edged by the Oran Eagles 60-54 in non-league play here Friday night.

Parma held a one point 15-14, lead at the end of the first quarter and kept it through the third with a nine point, 45-36 advantage at the end of the third period.

The Eagles tried to make a comeback in the fourth period but was disillusioned by the Pirates, although the Eagles outscored them in the foruth quarter 18-15.

Dick Ramsey and Steve Gibson did most of the damage for Parma, scoring 14 and 13 points respectively. Other Pirates in double figures were Rufus Barnes and Rolly Perkins with 11 apiece.

Ronnie Hurst flew the highest for Oran, scoring 16 points and was followed by Rick Taylor's 14.

Oran won the JV game 64-46 behind the 27 point leadership of Keith Campbell. Parma's high man was Daryl Ramsey with 24 points.

Bulldogs sweep pair from P.B.

Veteran Sikeston high school head basketball coach N. P. McDaniel received a birthday present in the form of a 66-58 SEMO conference basketball victory over Poplar Bluff from his team last night. The win, Sikeston's sixth of the season, broke a three- game Bulldog losing streak. A 44-42 B-game win assured the Bulldog junior varsity of at least a tie for the conference championship. The jayvee record is 13-1.

Six-foot- 4 Roger Tillman used his good reach inside to overpower Poplar Bluff and he scored 28 points in the process. He also grabbed 14 rebounds to lead the Dogs to a 46-41 rebounding edge.

It was a night of missed shots, missed free throws and many turnovers for both teams. Poplar Bluff was able to connect on just 28 per cent of their 78 shots. Sikeston was some better, making 38 per cent of their 79 tries. Neither team was successful at the free throw line. Poplar Bluff hit half their tries, 14 of 28 and Sikeston was even worse, missing two-thirds of their 24 attempts.

The Bulldogs, who have had troubles on defense all year long, came out using a weaving zone and other assorted manuevers to try to confuse the Mules, who have dropped four of their last five games. The defense was effective and the Mules committed 28 turnovers, to just 16 for the Bulldogs, giving SHS many scoring chances which they used.

Most of all, it was the failure of the Mules big men that cost them the win. Bruce Dameworth and Robert Dodd, normally both double figure scorers, hit just four of their 28 floor shots and combined for 11 points. Dameworth, however, was the top rebounder for either team with 17.

Before the game, the Sikeston coach indicated the Dogs would run more. Since they have not been a good shooting team, it was explained that Sikeston would go to a more running game, the object -- to put more shots up. The running game helped the Bulldog offense, and with the fast-breaking Mules keeping the tempo up, the fans were treated to wide- open, wild ballgame that provided them with excitement and a whole lot of action.

Poplar Bluff controlled the game early, leading most of the first period. But, in the last minute Sikeston scored three fast- break baskets on some errant Bluff passes and claimed a five- point, 18-13, lead.

Sikeston then expanded the lead as much as seven, 33-26, but the Mules used some mistakes by their hosts to narrow the margin to three at half, 35-32.

Bulldogs fans, after watching some rather unsatisfactory efforts in the last couple of games, were wondering if and/or how the Bulldogs would fritter away the lead in the second half. But, Sikeston qualmed their follower's nerves with a good second half and ran away with the win. The margin got as large as 14, 65-51, before a few late free throws made the final score closer.

The 66-58 win gave the Bulldogs their fifth win at home, out of six total victories. Sikeston is 2-4 in conference, with a 6-11 mark overall.

Sikeston's junior varsity overcame a cold-shooting first half and a determined bunch of visitors to outlast Poplar Bluff and claim a narrow 44-42 win. The victory ran the jayvee conference record to 6-0, and clinched at least a tie for the conference championship.

Ed "Showboat" Nunnelee led Sikeston scorers with 14 points. A second sophomore, Ron Priday, scored 13 more. Ed Threlkeld led the losers with 11.

The Bulldogs were cold the entire first half. Missing Bruce Lawrence and Mark Eaves, a couple of starters promoted to the varsity, they never got their offense moving and had totaled just 13 points at half to trail by two.

The second half was better, at least from the standpoint of scoring. Sikeston outscored Poplar Bluff 31-27 to claim the two point win. The two teams had been tied 25-25 entering that last frame.

Sikeston's jayvee team will face that same Poplar Bluff team Saturday evening at 8 o'clock for the championship of their own invitational junior varsity tournament. Poplar Bluff defeated Cape Central 45-44 in double overtime Wednesday evening to earn the right to play Sikeston. Sikeston took Charleston, 52-40.

Sikeston's last conference game will be February 22nd for both the varsity and junior varsity when they travel to Cape Girardeau to play Cape Central.

North in finals

CARUTHERSVILLE — Coach David McMahon's NPHS' Mustangs whipped the Cooter Wildcats 61-49 in JV action and Delta C-7 beat Hayti in the varsity game Thursday night in semi-final play while Friday night NPHS edged CHS 51-49 in varsity play and South Pemiscot beat Hayti 56-45 in the JV game in to advance in the Bootheel conference tournament here.

Coach McMahon's Mustangs had to battle from behind in the last period of play to avoid an upset by the Tigers. The Mustangs are seeded number one in the tourney.

CHS took a 12-8 first period advantage and played the favored Mustangs to a standstill through the second quarter, scoring 13 points apiece in the defensive battle.

After the intermission the Mustangs began to move offensively against the Tigers knocking three points off the four point lead by dumping in 13 points to 10 for coach Hugh James' Tigers.

After the Mustangs had finally overhauled the Tigers in the last minute of play the Caruthersville team had an opportunity to win the game but a turnover with two seconds left cost the Tigers the game.

In the junior varsity game SPHS vaulted into the finals Saturday night with a come from behind win over Hayti.

HHS edged out to a four point, 11-7, lead after the first seven minutes of the game but the Bulldogs put everything together in the second quarter and blasted to a 21-13 advantage in the period and led 28-24 at the half. After a 14-14 third period SPHS held the Indians to seven points while the Bulldogs were netting 14.

Joe Archer hit 16 for the Bulldogs and Bob Robinson scored 20 for Hayti.

Tigers bow

RISCO — Piggott, Ark. used their 2-1-2 zone to demolish the RHS Tigers here Friday night 71-53.

"They were the toughest team we've played all year", commented coach Stan Whitson.

Risco couldn't get the ball inside all night as the PHS zone was spread out too far for the Tigers.

Piggott took a 15-8 first quarter lead and added to their total in the second period to lead 33-27 at the half. Risco tried to come back in the second half but the height aadvantage of Piggott held the Tigers at bay.

Joe Wiley, at 6-6, led Piggott the win with 20 points Steve Landers hit 18 for the Tigers.

Risco won the B game 15-46 with Charles Johnson leading the way with 15 points.

possible under the circumstances and said: "You've taken a giant step forward."

Driver Edward Cherkoski responded: "You did a wonderful job for us, but we can't accept this agreement. It's all right for a three-year-old kid, but we're grown men with families ... Why can't the government cut taxes on fuel? We want a rollback and we want it now."

Before Shapp's arrival at the truck stop, Cherkoski's group, representing about 600 drivers, and groups in Allentown, Pa., and Columbia County voted to reject the agreement.

President Nixon's chief labor aide, W.J. Usery Jr., and Leonard Fleet, one of the negotiators for the truckers, predicted drivers would accept the agreement reached early Thursday morning.

But the pattern of voting by truckers' groups and statements from leaders of the protest indicated that no wholesale return to the road was in the offing.

"There has been no agreement," said Mike Parkhurst, editor of a trucking magazine and a strike leader. "The shutdown continues."

The agreement was rejected at truckers' meetings held Thursday and Friday at locations in Missouri, Connecticut, Illinois, Florida, Minnesota, Delaware, Arizona, and North and South Dakota.

The settlement reached in Washington included a government promise of all the diesel fuel the drivers needed, an immediate surcharge on freight rates to make up for recent fuel price hikes and the promise of future increases in freight rates.

Dear Mr. Terrell:

What a unique and delightful "All Night Sale" held at your store on Friday, January 25. I am sure it caught the imagination and attention of many Sikeston residents, as well as the surrounding communities.

We have heard many good reports about the "All Night Sale", the outstanding music furnished by Mr. Arnie Stone and the good refreshments served to everyone attending the sale. We also wish to extend our sincere thanks to Arnie Stone for the $16.64 he donated personally to the Missouri Special Olympics.

We are certainly grateful that you chose to donate the proceeds of this unusual sale to the Fifth Annual Missouri Special Olympics. Your gift of $113.00 will pay for lodging, food, insurance, uniforms, medals, etc. for 7 children from this area. Last year almost 200 children from Special Education classes and State Training Schools participated in the Regional Meet and 30 participants went on to the State Meet.

We are anticipating another successful Meet this year and are very appreciative of your support.

Cordially,
David Ragan
